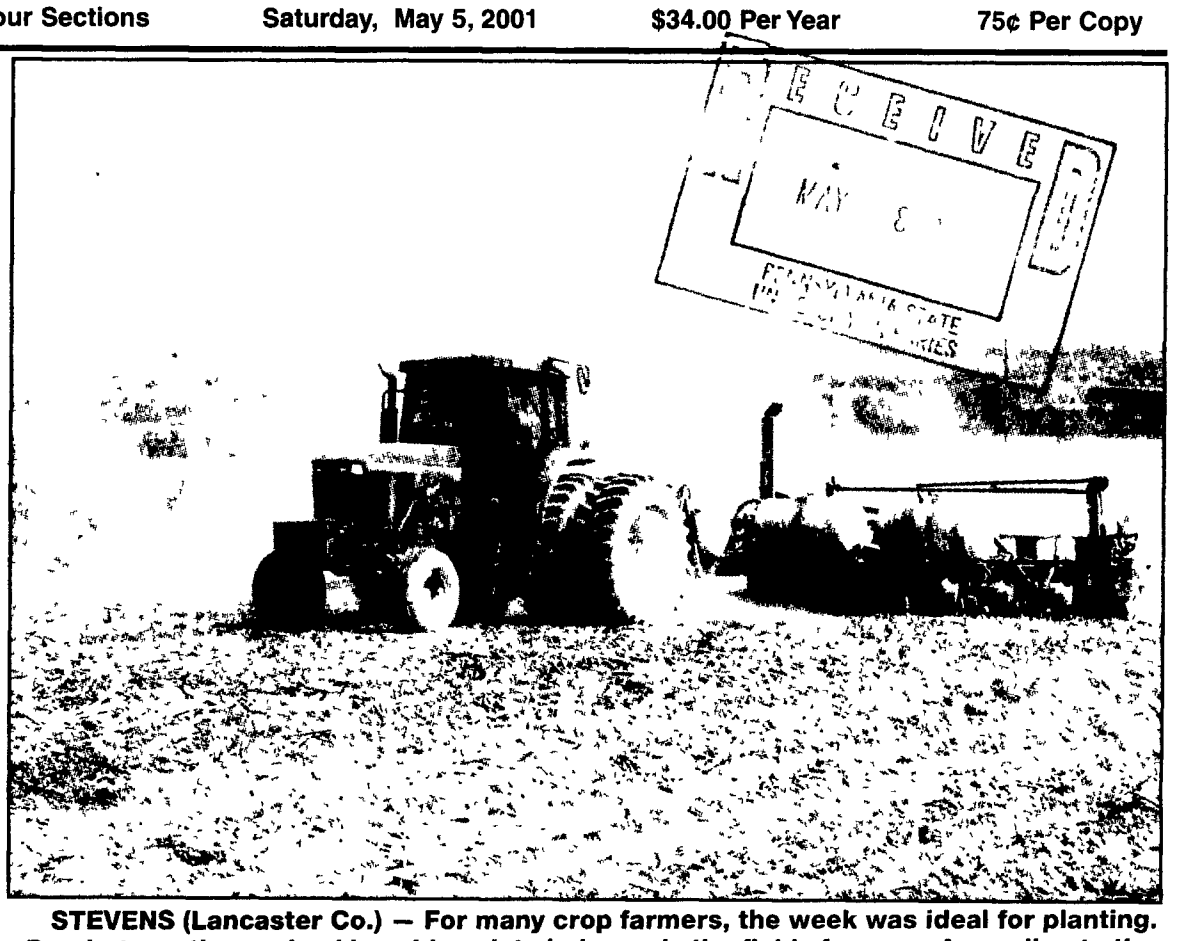
A Great Week For Fieldwork



STEVENS (Lancaster Co.) — For many crop farmers, the week was ideal for planting. Dry, hot weather arrived by midweek to help ready the fields for corn. According to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Statistics Service, for the week ending April 29, there were five days suitable for fieldwork, despite some low-lying areas still too wet to farm. Soil moisture was rated 3 percent short, 81 percent adequate, and 16 percent surplus. Spring plowing was 42 percent complete, 8 percent behind last year and 14 percent behind the 5-year average. Some oats were beginning to emerge in fair to good condition. Barley acreage was heading two weeks behind the average.

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture (PDA) has funded a $36,000, six-month research project to address the possible problem of stray voltage on dairy farms.

"Stray Voltage: Methods For Detection and Remediation" is being conducted by Penn State University and headed by the Agricultural Engineering Department.

Meanwhile, at the Capitol, the Pennsylvania Senate and House Agricultural and Rural Affairs Committees conducted a joint informational meeting Tuesday on the problem.

Mark A. Cook of the Wisconsin Public Service Commission presented the committees with information gathered on stray voltage in Wisconsin since 1987, when the state created a stray voltage task force.

Cook said he has traveled a million miles and has seen a thousand farms in his work toward developing a "viable stray voltage program" in Wisconsin.

According to Cook, stray volt-

Fundraiser Supports Pro-Agriculture Legislators

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — When Franklin County farmer John Stoner helped organize FARMER, Farmers Allied For Responsible More Effective Representation, the purpose was to have a voice in the legislative policies that affect agriculture.

After 21 years, FARMER continues its legacy as the political action arm of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (PFB).

At FARMER's annual statewide dinner on Wednesday at the Hilton Harrisburg Towers, Guy Donaldson, president, encouraged supporters to let their voice be known.

If legislators don't hear our concerns on policies such as environmental issues, our side will not be represented, not because legislators don't care but because they don't know and understand our needs, Donaldson said.

Mifflin Co. Correspondent

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — The 11th annual Penn State Poultry Science Club awards banquet took place late last week here at the Nittany Lion Inn.

In a surprise award not listed on the program, Heather Lehman of Mechanicsburg was called to the podium to receive the Bryce Jordan Student Leadership Award and $850 from the college of Ag Sciences. She also received the High Grade Point Average and Most Active Club Member awards.

Earlier in the year, Heather accepted the Outstanding Student of the Year Award at the International Poultry Exposition in Atlanta, Ga.

Nick Gardner received the Most Active New Club Member Award. Tracy Lindgren received the Highest Grade Point Average In Their Major Award.

New officers elected include Josh Elliott as president, Tracy Lindgren as vice president, Karen Groner as secretary/treasurer, and Nick Gardner as Ag Student Council representative. Dirk Wise serves as club adviser.

Jim Perdue of Perdue Farms in Salisbury, Md., spoke of his company's history, the major issues affecting their business and the poultry industry, and how they approach these issues.

Perdue said his grandfather started the business in 1920 and built the business around the still-current values of integrity, a strong work ethic, caring about the individual, and a frugal approach to business. The company expanded when Jim's father Frank became president in 1941.

"We're involved in all aspects

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO

Report Supplied By USDA

Daily National Grain Market Summary

Wheat bids turned lower after two days of higher trends due to fund selling and profit taking on the Boards. Corn bids showed strength again as wet weather is seen as beneficial to already planted crops. Soybean bids received support from fund and commercial buying. Wheat 2 to 4 cents lower except Portland 4 cents higher. Corn steady to 2 cents higher. Sorghum 2 cents higher. Soybeans 1 to 7 cents higher.

Winter wheat harvest is underway in southern areas and yields look good. The poor conditions reported in some areas have limited declines but ideas are that it is not as bad as earlier thought. Profit taking set in across the Boards, pushing bids lower. Some areas have been ignored or abandoned but most places are seeing fair to good crop conditions. Overnight export sale to Jordan helped keep bids from falling too far.

Corn planting is well underway with Iowa reporting at least half their fields seeded. Planting, however, is significantly behind the average in that area. Rainy forecasts for much of the Midwest may slow planting progress many places but already seeded fields will benefit. Fund buying on the Board kept soybean bids climbing higher.

The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

DON'T FORGET "SAINT MOM"

This year, Mother's Day (May 13) comes at the tail end of the Three Chilly Saints, May 11, 12, and 13, named for Mammertus, Pancras, and Gervais (or Gervatius). These feast days traditionally bring chilly weather—perhaps some fleece slippers for Mom would be in order, so she can keep her sense of humor through this final cold nip. If her demeanor is still frosty, remind her that the ancient spring festival to honor the mother goddess, Cybele, may have been the precursor to Mother's Day. It was held much earlier, just after the spring equinox, but nevertheless, it was called Hilaria, from the Latin for "cheerful"!

What is a home without a mother?

–Thomas Edison, American inventor (1847–1931)

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ Shear sheep during the light of the Moon (after May 22 this month).

Lancaster Farming

OPINION

Good Use Of Coupons

One legislator sees a program as a way to protect family farms while ensuring a bountiful array of fresh, healthy food for everyone.

State Rep. Sara Steelman (D-Indiana), recently proposed an amendment to increase the state food coupon program by $2.5 million, from $1.5 million to $4 million.

Especially notable: it expands the senior food coupon program, which provides farmers' market coupons for seniors. Seniors can use the coupons to purchase fresh, healthy food grown locally, and supports local farm markets.

"Farmers' markets are a wonderful way to market fresh, wholesome produce and meats directly to the public," said Steelman. The markets are a viable source of revenue for farmers and can be "an economic success story for the state."

Farm market popularity is soaring, perhaps to all-time highs, and the coupons work. They benefit our seniors and provide additional income for producers.

Properly guided programs such as this are what put Pennsylvania produce and our farmers on the national map. We salute these efforts.

To Monitor Your Asparagus Field For Asparagus Beetles

Asparagus is producing a significant quantity of spears after a delayed start because of cool spring weather.

Two types of asparagus beetles are also present and can do significant damage to your crop. Both the asparagus beetle and the spotted asparagus beetle overwinter as adults and begin feeding immediately following emergence. The asparagus beetle emerges before the spotted asparagus beetle.

The adult asparagus beetle has a black body with a metallic blue head. On each wing cover are three rectangular metallic yellow spots that often have red markings along the margin. The spotted asparagus beetle adults are orange with six black spots on each wing cover. The adults of both species range in length from ¼ to 4/10 of an inch in length.

Both begin laying eggs within a week after emergence. The asparagus beetle deposits its dark brown, oval-shaped eggs on the spears in rows of 3-8, and the eggs are attached by one end to the spear. The spotted asparagus beetle lays its green eggs individually. In three to eight days the eggs hatch and the larva feed for 10-14 days as they develop through four instars.

The larvae of the asparagus beetle are dark gray with a black head. The larvae of the spotted asparagus beetle are cream-colored with a light brown head. When fully developed, the larvae crawl to the ground where they burrow into the soil and spin a silken cocoon. Here they pupate for 5-10 days before emerging as adults to complete the life cycle. Typically there are two life cycles completed in Pennsylvania each year.

The asparagus beetles cause damage to the crop in several ways. Adults and larvae feeding on the spears and tips cause scarring. Frass from both of the stages can stain the spear, and eggs on the spears are very unappealing. Any of these problems can make the spears unmarketable.

The spotted asparagus beetle larva feed on asparagus berries. This damage has little economic significance in production fields. It would be a problem in seed production, however.

To Control Asparagus Pests

In small garden patches, hand picking can control the asparagus beetle adults. The larvae can be controlled by brushing them to the ground. The larvae usually are not able to reclimb the stalks and die on the hot soil. This will not be practical, however, for commercial production.

Many beneficial insects feed on the various life stages of asparagus beetles. Ladybird beetles, other predacious beetles, soldier bugs, wasps, flies, and dragonflies all reduce the asparagus beetle populations.

Testrastichus asparagi is a tiny wasp 1/16 of an inch long and metallic green. It attacks the eggs of the asparagus beetle. The wasp could kill as much as 70 percent of the eggs and larvae. The wasp chews and hole in the beetle egg and drinks the liquid or lays one of its own eggs in the beetle egg. The wasp egg will hatch and grow inside the beetle larva and eventually kill it. Sometimes the wasps are so abundant that no insecticides are needed. However, the empty egg cases left by the wasp's feeding can be unsightly and make the spears unmarketable as well.

Before deciding to use insecticides, you should monitor the field for beetle activity. If 10 percent or more of the plants have beetles present, control could be warranted. However, the time of day will have a large impact on beetle activity. Beetles are much more active during the warm afternoon and evening hours. If the scouting is done during the early morning or during cool weather, a 5 percent infestation rate would be a better threshold.

The disadvantage of using an insecticide is that beneficial insect populations will be reduced as well as the pest populations. If however you determine your beetle populations require control, a number of products are labeled for use. These include Lannate, malathion, methoxychor, Ambush, Pounce, and Sevin. Be sure to follow the label instructions especially the preharvest interval.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

WHEN DOORS ARE SLAMMED IN YOUR FACE

Background Scripture:
Acts 13:4 through 14:28.
Devotional Reading:
Psalms 90.

Recently I celebrated my birthday. In looking and thinking back over my life, I saw it as a series of doors — some open, some closed, and some locked. At the time, I rarely recognized them as doors. More often I saw them as disappointments, losses, failures, and sometimes even opportunities.

Actually, in retrospect, I realize that, whatever else they may have been, they were all of them also opportunities. Whenever one was slammed shut, God opened another one. Unfortunately, I often failed to see the door God had opened or, seeing it, did not have the faith to cross its portal. I imagine that you experience this in your life, too.

Although I had often read it, I had failed to learn the lesson Joseph imparted to his brothers: "Fear not .... As for you, you meant evil against me; but God meant it for good, to bring about that many people should be kept alive" (Gen. 50:19b,20.) Joseph's brothers had slammed the door in his face, but God opened another one and Joseph had the faith to walk through it.

First Missionary Journey

We see this same truth at work in Acts 13 and 14, the account of the so-called First Missionary Journey of Paul and Barnabas.

Arriving first on the island of Cyprus and then on the mainland of Asia Minor, Paul and Barnabas, and for a time John Mark, met with a variety of responses. On Cyprus they were well-received in the synagogues. At Perga of Pamphylia, however, after an initial positive response in the synagogue, some of the Jews turned against them so that Paul and Barnabas declared: "It was necessary that the word of God should be spoken first to you. Since you thrust it from you ... behold we turn to the Gentiles" (13:46). Eventually, they were driven from the area by force.

The same thing happened at Iconium of Pisidia. Acts tells us that the people were divided, some siding with Paul and Barnabas, and some with their Jewish opponents. Despite an initial overcredulous reception in Lystra of Galatia — "The gods have come down to us in the likeness of men!" (14:11) — Paul was stoned by his opponents and left Lystra under duress.

What God Did, And Does

Finally the two missionaries sailed back to their home base, Antioch of Syria.

Now, how should they report this effort for which they had been sent out by the Holy Spirit? In three important cities they had met both receptivity and harsh opposition.

Their opponents had harassed and persecuted them from one town to another. Yet, for all this they had encountered, these two had left behind a series of fledgling Christian communities. So, when the church at Antioch came together to hear of their efforts, Paul and Barnabas "declared all that God had done with them, and how he had opened a door of faith to the Gentiles" (14:27). The doors of the synagogues had been slammed shut against them, but the Lord had opened some Gentile doors instead.

In our personal lives as well as the life of the Church, whenever we hear or see a door being closed or even slammed, it is important for us to remember this and look for the door of opportunity that God always opens for us.

It is for God to open the door. It is for us to go through it and seize the opportunity the Lord offers.

HIGH-RISE LAYER HOUSE COMPOST SYSTEM

The composting process eliminates methane gas and hydrogen sulfide odors while converting manure in a pathogen-free, weed seed-free organic product that will never revert to raw manure.

The end product is a stable organic material which has retained most of its nutrients and is no longer a breeding source for flies, beetles or other insects.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

Milk Price Outlook Uncertain

- Cash market stronger.
- Futures markets volatile.
- GDP for first quarter up 2 percent.

I am stunned to see the recent increase in butter and cheese prices, and hence the Class III and IV futures prices. Like most analysts, this caught many by surprise. Let's review the markets.

The cash market for cheese and butter experienced a lot of volatility this week. At the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, barrel prices rose from $1.4325 per pound on Monday, April 23, to $1.52 per pound by Friday, April 27. Likewise, block cheese prices rose from $1.45 per pound on Monday to $1.54 by Friday.

USDA reports these prices are the highest cash cheese prices since the fall of 1999. Many buyers are building inventories in anticipation of tighter milk supplies later in the year.

The butter market at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange reached $2 per pound this week. Grade AA butter rose from $1.95 per pound Monday, peaked at $2.0125 per pound Wednesday, then fell to $1.9275 by Friday. USDA reports that while butter demand is only "fair at best," people are holding butter stocks in anticipation of a short milk supply.

The futures markets at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange reflected the tightness in the cash markets. As of April 27, Class III settlement prices were $12.02 for April, $13.54 for May, $13.94 for June, $13.97 for July, $13.95 for August, $14.03 for September, and $13.56 for October.

Class IV prices at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange as of April 27 were $14.45 for April, $15.10 for May-July, $15.40 for August and September, and $14.95 for October. The peak Class IV price was down from $16 earlier in the week.

So, which way are prices headed in the next few months? Let's review the options.

One school of thought is "you ain't seen nothing yet." These folks think the milk supply will be crippled through the fall months. Buyers of cheese and butter fall into this camp and are buying now in order to avoid paying much more later in the year. Many remember when butter prices hit $2.81 per pound in September, 1998. These folks are bolstered in part by the latest GDP report that indicates that the real Gross Domestic Product for the first quarter of this year grew at an astonishing 2 percent! Many had expected a weak 1 percent growth rate. While the economy may be slowing, we are nowhere near a recession. That means continued moderate to strong growth in demand for dairy products.

The other school of thought is, "if it's too good to be true, it's probably not." This group thinks that the reduction in the milk supply is only temporary and that cows will recover. Given the large number of cows out west, the milk supply could respond very quickly. I'm partial to this group. I think the reduction in production per cow is due in part to poor forage and a hard winter, but also because of reduced use of inputs.

When farmers are cash-starved, they have to make cuts somewhere. This means making undesirable decisions (i.e. using less feed, selling cows, etc). The milk supply situation could turn around very quickly with spring forages, high milk prices, and cheap grains. Also, we could see a limit on how high butter prices get because of imports.

Anytime butter gets above $1.85, it pays to import butter outside the quota. A final negative for the Class IV price is an expected reduction in the support price for nonfat dry milk. USDA will not continue to buy 47 percent of all the powder produced in the U.S. They are likely waiting for market prices to recover before announcing a reduction. Guess what, market prices have recovered! That could result in a slight drop in the price of nonfat dry milk, and hence the Class IV price.

USDA reported this week that international prices for skim milk powder were $0.93 per pound in Western and Eastern Europe, and $0.97 in Oceania. Thus a reduction in the support price of nonfat dry milk at this time would not result in much of a drop in domestic nonfat dry milk prices, but it would reduce surplus stocks. Class IV prices would drop more substantially when international prices weaken.

Which school of thought do you belong to?

SERVICEBERRY BLOOMS: A SURE SIGN OF SPRING

Harry Blanchet
Penn State Cooperative Extension Agent

Natural events signify the coming of spring for many Pennsylvanians. Some people think of the first robins singing or forsythia bushes blooming as harbingers of spring. Others look for the appearance of white serviceberry blossoms. Serviceberries are shrubs and small trees that grow in woodlands and thickets throughout Pennsylvania. They are easy to overlook during most of the year, but in early spring, they become conspicuous because their blossoms brighten drab woodlands.

Serviceberries are important for wildlife. According to Dr. Susan J. Aldworth of the Botany Department at Iowa State University, at least 22 species of birds and 11 species of mammals eat some part of serviceberry plants. Serviceberry shrubs and trees not only flower early; they also are one of our first trees to produce fruit. Thus, the berries are a significant source of food for nesting and migrating birds that are returning to Pennsylvania from their winter ranges. Catbirds, northern flickers, robins, thrushes, waxwings, orioles, and grosbeaks consume serviceberry fruits in late spring and early summer, while ruffled grouse browse the buds in winter. Serviceberry fruits, bark, buds, and twigs provide nourishment for black bears, beavers, foxes, red squirrels, rabbits, hares, and white-tailed deer.

People as well as wildlife eat serviceberry fruits. Native Americans mixed serviceberries with venison and bear meat to make pemmican. Today, people use serviceberries in pies, jellies, and jams.

One interesting thing to learn about a plant or animal is the origin of its common name. Serviceberry plants also are called sarvisberry, sarvis, shadbush, shadblow, and Juneberry. One possible origin for the name "serviceberry" was to signify the reappearance of circuit-riding preachers in rural parts of the Appalachians after their absence in winter. The preachers conducted services for prayer meetings, weddings, and funerals. Thus, to some people, the blooming of serviceberry trees and shrubs meant preachers would soon be returning to conduct services. The common name "sarvis" may have derived from the way the word "service" sounds in certain dialects. Some authorities dispute the above explanations and believe that both terms refer to a similar English fruit tree known as "service" or "sarvis."

"Shadbush" or "shadblow" probably originated because the tree blooms at about the same time that shad run up Atlantic Coast rivers to spawn. Juneberry refers to the mouth when the fruits ripen over much of its range.

Whatever the source of its common names, there are several species of serviceberries and a variety of preferred habitats. For example, some species occur on dry hillsides, while others thrive in wet areas. The growth form can also vary by species. Some tend to become small trees, while others are more shrub-like. As is often the case when there are a variety of forms and habitats, identification to an exact species can be difficult. The identification problem is compounded because nurseries have developed cultivated serviceberries, and there are many naturally occurring hybrids.

Serviceberries are favorite plants for many gardeners and people who enjoy the outdoors. They are native to Pennsylvania and attractive year-round. The flowers brighten dreary spring woodlands and foliage adds color to autumn landscapes. Serviceberries also are an important source of food for wildlife.

The Pennsylvania Forest Stewardship Program provides private forestland owners with information and assistance to promote healthy and productive forests. 'Greenworks' TV Show Receives Top National Awards

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co) — The "GreenWorks for Pennsylvania" television series has won top honors in the 2001 Videographer Awards.

"The strength of the 'GreenWorks for Pennsylvania' television show is its ability to show people in action," said Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) Acting Secretary David E. Hess.

"Pictures provide a much more powerful tool in communicating the message of environmental stewardship to the audience, especially to students."

The GreenWorks program "The Environmental Classroom" received the top honor "Award of Excellence" in the Programs/Community Access category, as well as "Honorable Mention" in the Creativity/Editing category. The episode was edited by Mary Erades.

The Environmental Classroom features students at the Monagacci program at East Hills Middle School in Bethlehem, Northampton County, who are learning more by integrating environmental education into their curriculum.

Another episode, "From the Bay to Pa.," shot by videographer David Sarasti, received an "Award of Distinction" in the Creativity/Cinematography category. This "GreenWorks" episode travels the Chesapeake Bay watershed through areas of Maryland and Pennsylvania to show how people's actions hundreds of miles away can impact the Bay.

The "GreenWorks" shows awarded were chosen from more than 2,400 entries from the United States and several foreign countries in this year's competition.

"GreenWorks" is produced by the Environmental Fund for Pennsylvania (EFP) in partnership with the DEP. "We are honored to receive these awards for the show," EFP Executive Director Timothy J. Schlitzer said. "Our goal is to inspire everyone to get to get involved with protecting our environment by showing positive stories of people working to do that on 'GreenWorks.'"

EFP funds environmental education and improvement projects from contributions made through payroll-deduction programs set up by employers and the commonwealth, and other donations.

To date, 83 stations in Pennsylvania carry the show. Any broadcast outlet in Pennsylvania may request the series, and copies of each show may be purchased from EFP for a minimal charge.

Stray Voltage Concerns Under Scrutiny In Project

age is a natural phenomenon that can be found between two contact points in any animal confinement area where electricity is grounded.

The main concern over stray voltage is its proven ability to cause "behavior changes of reluctance and avoidance" in livestock, he said.

An example of such behavior would be a tendency in cows to shy away from a water source because of the presence of stray voltage.

Electrocution and lightning are not examples of stray voltage, Cook pointed out, and neither are overtly physical signs such as burn marks, sore hooves, abscesses, or muscle damage. The effects of stray voltage are more subtle, he said.

Cook said that even though stray voltage is a proven phenomenon, it is difficult to determine its actual economic impact because effects on livestock are hard to pinpoint. Symptoms such as poor milk let-down or reduced feeding can have numerous causes beside stray voltage.

"Stray voltage is just one of many factors that interplay to affect animal behavior," he said.

For that reason, Cook said it is essential for veterinarians to be involved in any effort to reduce the impact of stray voltage.

Although the focus of stray voltage research has been on dairy operations, Cook pointed out that beef, poultry, sheep, swine and even fish can be affected as well.

In Wisconsin, the stray voltage program is run by two agencies: the Public Service Commission and the Department of Agriculture, Trade and Consumer Protection.

To address the problem of stray voltage on more than 5,000 of about 20,000 Wisconsin dairy farms, the state has employed electrical engineers, master electricians, veterinarians and farm ombudsmen.

Cook said that the program has accomplished an 8-to-1 reduction in average cow contact voltage in Wisconsin since 1988. The cost of this improvement included $650 million on "rural distribution infrastructure upgrades," $4 million to farmers for on-farm rewiring, and $1.5 million on university research.

Stray voltage can originate from wiring on the farm, from utility company cables, or from a combination of both, Cook said.

Dr. Bruce Schmucker of the Bureau of Animal Health and Diagnostic Services of the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture outlined the following steps in Penn State's stray voltage project.

- Identify farms that have "true" stray voltage problems.
- Establish baselines for stray voltage and herd production parameters.
- Examine various mitigation procedures and determine appropriate solutions.
- Determine the value of the mitigating procedures by measuring voltage levels and production parameters.

Schmucker said that representatives from the dairy industry, electric service providers, Pennsylvania State Grange, university field investigation service and the PDA would participate in the project to establish a threshold level for corrective action and measure its effectiveness.

Crawford County extension agent and project spokesman Tom Wilson reported that 17 farms in 14 Pennsylvania counties have been visited as of May 1.

The 17 farms had reported cow symptoms typically associated with stray voltage, such as high somatic cell counts and poor milk let-down, Wilson said. However, just two of the farms warranted further investigation into the problem of stray voltage.

Wilson said he believes that other causes — such as improper milking procedures — are involved in many of those problems.

"Every symptom that stray voltage causes has several other causes," he said.

Wilson said that a major goal of the project is to create standards for approaching the problem.

"In Pennsylvania stray voltage does occur, but we have no standard way of addressing it," he said.

Chairman of the House Agricultural and Rural Affairs Committee Raymond Bunt Jr. agreed that more conclusive information is needed on the issue of stray voltage.

"There's data out there that's conflicting," he said.

Bunt said the state would make a decision on what to do about the problem of stray voltage after conclusions of the Penn State project are reported later this year.

Nora Mead Brownell of the Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission pledged her support to the state — "as the stray voltage issue evolves into a shared commitment among the farming community, state agencies, and electric distribution companies," she wrote in a letter to the joint committee.

Farmers concerned about stray voltage should contact their veterinarian, their utility company, and their Penn State Extension Office, Wilson said.

IMPROVE YOUR PASTURES
AND HAVE TONS OF SUMMER FEED AS WELL

STEP 1 Plow or Roundup about mid to late May. This way you can still utilize your spring growth

STEP 2 Fertilize and drill in one (or a blend of several) of the fine forages described at right or plant our silage corn. Corn does very well where pasture is plowed down. This may also help break up disease or insect cycles in old pastures.

STEP 3 Graze or cut sorghum sudan at 24 in. (Approx. 40 days after seeding and every 30 days thereafter). Warning: never feed sorghum sudan when it's less than 18" tall.

STEP 4 About mid Sept. plow or disk in manure and plant a high quality Barenbrug Grass Legume Mix. Always take a soil test before new seeding.

Graze lightly when 6 to 8 in. tall

WHEN FERTILIZED AND GRAZED PROPERLY, BARENBRUG FORAGES HAVE MORE THAN DOUBLED MILK YIELD PER ACRE COMPARED TO TRADITIONAL PASTURE.

BROWN MID RIB (BMR) Hybrid Sorghum Sudan. This premium forage has outstanding regrowth and tillering characteristics. The BMR trait increases the digestibility of the stems and reduces lignin by 40 to 60%. Because of this farmers will see increased milk production, or weight gains. The softer leaves and stems make for a more palatable feed.

MEGA GREEN Delayed Maturing Hybrid Sorghum x Sudangrass from Walter Moss Seed Co., is a very high yielding multi-leaf variety designed for hay or grazing. It has the potential to out yield silage corn. When left to grow it can reach heights of 12 ft. or more with out making a seedhead. Here in Lancaster Co. I have not seen it go to head at all. Extra leafy leaves can reach 3 in. wide and 4 ft. long.

Both Mega Green and Century can be no tilled into old alfalfa stands after first cutting to double your haylage yields. Because of the high sugar content cows really go for it and milk well too.

BARKANT FORAGE TURNIP from Barenbrug is a very leafy turnip that has won yield trials including one in Berks Co. PA where it was seeded May 18, 1999 and harvested June 30th and rivaled the yield of Sorghum Sudangrass. It has a RFV of 216. It can also be mixed with Sorghum Sudan.

Ag Department Announces Statewide Plum Pox Survey

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) - Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes announced statewide surveys Tuesday this week for the plum pox virus.

Officials are in the field working with landowners to verify problem fields, to identify susceptible trees, and to begin sampling and testing of the trees. The statewide survey is necessary to detect any plum pox virus-infected trees.

"We need the help of everyone in the quarantine zone — backyard fruit growers, homeowners, renters, businesses and commercial growers — to help eradicate this fruit tree disease so that the huge economic losses being experienced by the fruit industry are not in vain," Hayes said.

Plum pox virus poses absolutely no threat to the consumer. The fruit from infected trees can be eaten fresh or as processed fruit. Plum pox virus is, however, an extremely serious threat to the peach, nectarine, apricot and plum industry of Pennsylvania because it drastically reduces a trees ability to produce fruit. It is our goal at the Department of Agriculture to help lead the fight to eradicate this virus. The planting of virus-susceptible trees and shrubs anywhere in the quarantine area would make additional host material available for virus infection and jeopardize the opportunity to eradicate the virus."

Plum pox virus causes a disease in stone fruit, such as peaches, nectarines, plums, apricots and related ornamental trees in the genus Prunus, including purple leaf plum, sand cherry, flowering almond and flowering peach. These varieties and hybrids are hosts of the virus strain in Pennsylvania. Plum pox virus is a viral disease, also known as sharka, and is a limiting factor for stone fruit production in areas of the world where it occurs. Aphids spread the virus from infected to healthy trees.

Homeowners living within the quarantine area also will be contacted for verification of susceptible trees, which will be tested for the virus. If the trees are infected, they must be eradicated.

Hayes also reminds residents and business owners of restrictions on planting plum pox virus-susceptible trees or shrubs in the virus quarantine zones in Adams and Cumberland counties.

Restrictions cover all of Dickinson Township, South Middleton Township, and Mount Holly Springs in Cumberland County.

In Adams County, the areas affected are Huntington Township, Latimore Township, York Springs, the northern portion of Tyrone Township, and the eastern portion of Menallen Township.

The restrictions on planting strengthens the quarantine and will help the Department of Agriculture conduct an efficient and effective survey focused on locating infected trees. Infection of the plum pox virus in trees can take years before detection is possible. The planting of more trees during this process complicates the survey, adds cost and increases to the number of times property owners must be contacted by surveyors, and poses an increased risk to our fruit growers.

Since the virus' discovery in Adams County in September 1999, the state Department of Agriculture, in conjunction with the U.S. Department of Agriculture, has conducted extensive surveys and more than 70,000 lab tests last year to establish a quarantine area.

The commonwealth has invested more than $5.1 million to eradicate the plum pox virus and indemnify farmers.

For more information about plum pox virus, contact the Department of Agricultures Bureau of Plant Industry at (717) 772-5203.

Hogs Wanted For Barrow Test Program At Cornell

HARFORD, N.Y. — The New York Pork Producers Cooperative, together with Cornell Cooperative Extension, Cornell University Department of Animal Sciences, and the Cornell University College of Veterinary Medicine are sponsoring a Barrow Test program at the Cornell Training and Research Center in Harford, N.Y.

The Barrow Test program is an excellent opportunity for hog producers to evaluate the genetics in their breeding program. A test group from a breeder consists of three barrow from a single sire line and a single sow line.

Feed conversion efficiency, weight gains, percentage of fat, leanness, and loin eye are all evaluated. The program also offers an educational opportunity for 4-H'ers in using their skills to evaluate the results.

To be successful this, the Barrow Test program needs additional consignors. The planned starting dates are July 10 to 15 and the conclusion will be in early fall.

Producers interested in participating in this program should contact Wyman Drake at (716) 374-5098 or Ed Brayman at (607) 265-3769 or Dr. Tro Bui at (607) 255-4505 as soon as possible.

175 Persons Attend Franklin County Farm Bureau Banquet

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — Recently, a gathering of 175 persons took place at the Lighthouse Restaurant, Chambersburg to celebrate the 50th anniversary of the Franklin County Farm Bureau. County President Titus Martin of Fayetteville presided over the banquet during which past leaders were honored and congratulations were accepted from county and state elected officials.

The Franklin County Farm Bureau was organized by a group of 25 charter members on April 3, 1951. It was known then as the Farmers' Association, a county unit of the Pennsylvania Farmers' Association. The state and county Farmers' Associations took on the name Farm Bureau in 1993. Today, the statewide organization represents over 28,000 farm and rural families. The Franklin County Farm Bureau recently surpassed its membership record of 1,295 family members.

Eugene Hege of Fayetteville was voted first president of the Franklin County Farmers' Association in 1951 and was in attendance at the 50th anniversary banquet to receive a surprise presentation — the Outstanding Member Award from Martin.

Franklin County's charter members were recognized by D. Eugene Gayman of Chambersburg, a former county president and former vice president of Pennsylvania Farm Bureau. Six of the 25 charter members were in attendance at the banquet.

Guy Donaldson, current president of the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau, was present to help honor the county's past presidents — 13 of whom were present for a group photo. Marlin Miller, manager of Pennsylvania Farm Bureau's Member Relations' Division, offered his best wishes to the county organization and recognized the eight members who have served on the Pennsylvania Farm Bureau board of directors including present director P. Joseph Musser of Newburg. Musser, in turn honored past staff secretaries for the Franklin County Farm Bureau office.

Citations from the Franklin County Board of Commissioners were presented by commissioners Warren Elliott and Robert Thomas. In addition, proclamations honoring the county Farm Bureau's 50 years of achievements on behalf of the community were presented by Rep. Pat Fleagle and assistants for Rep. C. Allan Egolf and Sen. Terry Punt. Rep. Jeff Coy also joined the legislators in sponsoring the citation, but was not present.

Planting Corn For Top Yields Is A Game Of Inches

COLUMBUS, Ohio — An extra inch between corn plants can mean a lot in terms of yield loss, said agronomist Peter Thomison, Ohio State University.

With planting season just around the corner, a few hours in the machine shed can save the disappointment of lost yields at harvest, Thomison said. Now is the time to tune up planting equipment for a uniform seed placement in the furrow, he said.

"Timely planter servicing and adjustment, as well as appropriate management practices, can help prevent many stand uniformity problems," Thomison said.

Thomison's counterpart at Purdue University, Bob Nielsen, said many farmers may be losing five to eight bushels of grain per acre because of uneven planting spacing. These values come from field research conducted over a number of years and locations throughout Indiana, and a survey of Indiana and Ohio fields over nine years, he said.

Spacing alone may not be the cause of yield loss, Thomison said.

Other variables, such as less-than-optimal population levels, appear to cut into yields. A University of Illinois study concluded that skips reduce yield in fields where the intended population is at or below the optimum, while doubles increase yield when populations are less than optimum.

Therefore, spacing variability caused by doubles may actually be beneficial when seeding rates are suboptimal.

"One conclusion that can be drawn from the Illinois study is that population is the first variable that must be considered in planting time decision making," Thomison said.

Within-row gaps as large as six feet can cut yields by up to five percent, Thomison said. That's a 7.35-bushel-per-acre reduction from a 147-bushel-per-acre corn yield. On the other hand, test weights of two or more tightly-grouped plants can drop by as much as a quarter pound.

Stands with varying plant heights are generally related to environmental conditions that delay plant emergence, and out of a farmer's control. Height irregularities often occur in conservation tillage fields where soils are prone to extended cold and wet soil conditions.

Proper planter adjustments and operation can help minimize uneven emergence, Thomison said.

Even with uniform within-row plant spacing, emergence delays can lead to yield loss, Thomison said. Expect a five to eight percent yield loss if half or more of the stand emerges two weeks late. A 20 percent loss can occur if emergence is delayed by three or more weeks.

Thomison offers these tips for improving uniformity of seed placement at planting:

- Avoid excessive tillage trips, especially on wet soils.
- Check seed depth and seed-soil contact often during planting.
- Distribute resides evenly over rows.
- With plate-type planters, match the seed grade with correct planter plate.
- Check for wear on the back plate and brush on finger pick-ups.
- Check tension with a feeler gauge and tighten correctly.
- Check for wear on double-disk openers and seed tubes.
- Make sure sprocket settings are correct on the planter transmission.
- Check for worn chains, stiff chain links and tire pressures.
- Lubricate all chains and grease fittings.
- Make sure seed drop tubes are clean and clear.
- Clean seed tube sensors on planters equipped with monitors.
- Properly align coulters and disk openers.
- With air planters, match the air pressure with the weight of seed being planted.

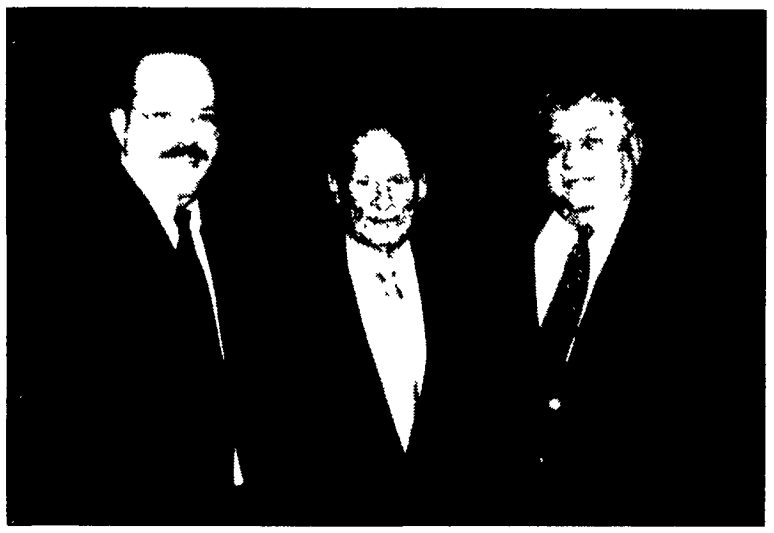
Photos Take Stock Of Dairy Expo, Little International Activities



Although the 2001 Little International and Dairy Expo took place simultaneously at Penn State's Ag Arena on Saturday, April 21, the Penn State Stockmen's Club dinner dance the previous evening served as a good time also to present some outstanding alumni awards. Dr. Terry Etherton, left, Department Head, Dairy and Animal Science, presented awards to Jack Dreibelbis of Camp Hill, center, 2001 Animal Science Distinguished Alumnus, and Dr. James Holter, professor emeritus of animal and nutrition sciences at the University of New Hampshire and 2001 Dairy Science Distinguished Alumnus.

Jeffrey Hostetter, left, formerly a Lebanon County native, accepted the 2001 Young Dairy Leader award from Penn State Dairy Science Club president Nicole Over. Hostetter told the crowd how his years at Penn State taught him how to build relationships and work with people. Hostetter is working as a dairy nutritionist for Big Gain Feeds in southern Minnesota.

Penn State senior Angie Moschini of Spencer, Mass., accepts the 2001 Davey Award from Heather Hostetter, last year's award recipient. Heather works for Monsanto Dairy Business in southern Minnesota.

Nichole Over, right, president of the Penn State Dairy Science Club, presents a plaque to N. Alan Bair, the Dairy Expo Dedicatee. The award is presented to an outstanding promoter of the dairy industry and Dairy Science Club.

Farm Bureau Calls For Legal Amnesty, End to Racial Profiling For Migrant Farm Workers

Glenmont, N.Y. — New Yorkers must recognize and accept the realities of present-day labor economics on the farm, and work to improve them, say officials at New York Farm Bureau.

"Many of our farms could not stay in business without the valuable contributions of migrant workers, most of whom travel regularly from Mexico, Guatemala, and Jamaica," says John Lincoln, president of New York Farm Bureau.

A recent "farmworker advocacy day" at the state capitol was set against a backdrop of Farm Bureau's long history of advocacy for migrant workers, including active lobbying for improved housing, health care, and bi-lingual "whistle-blower" hotlines by which workers can report unsafe or illegal working conditions.

"Full-time residents of the state rarely want to work in New York's relatively short harvest season, which offers only temporary employment," says Lincoln.

"So New York farmers have to compete to attract a seasonal work force by offering a package of incentives that includes improved housing and high farm wages."

Racial profiling

Most troublesome now for New York's migrant farm workers are racial profiling and zealous pursuit of workers by the Immigration and Naturalization Service (INS), says Julie Suarez, New York Farm Bureau's senior associate director of public policy.

"The INS routinely sets up blockades around grocery stores and laundromats in rural New York and detains only Hispanic-looking customers as they try to leave. This is nothing more than racial profiling. Whether it occurs in New York City or in western New York, it is morally indefensible. It ends up hurting the workers, hurting farmers, and hurting rural New York's economy."

"We need the enforcement dogs called off," says Brandon Mallory, founder and director of Agri-Placement Services, Syracuse, N.Y., and a specialist in placing migrant workers on farms.

Addressing a recent Farm Bureau conference, Mallory estimated that 85 percent of the farm workers in the Finger Lakes region are Hispanic migrantsa huge change from a decade ago and that "perhaps half of them are not here legally.

"If New York's farmers are to retain what many have come to see as a vitally important pool of dependable labor, New York needs to get behind a move to legitimize the current work force," added Mallory.

While Farm Bureau supports Mallory's call for "legitimization," says Suarez, "It needs to be pointed out that the typical Farm Bureau-member farmer does not knowingly hire illegal workers.

They arrive with seemingly valid documentation and there is only just so far you can go in checking before you cross the threshold into illegal racial discrimination."

New York Requires Location On Milk Labels

ALBANY, N.Y. — The New York Assembly recently passed legislation sponsored by Agriculture Committee Chairman Bill Magee requiring the placement of the name of the city, village or hamlet and zip code upon the packages of all milk processed and packaged in the state.

"More and more, consumers are saying that they want to buy locally grown, raised and processed agricultural products, so we should be doing everything we can to assist them in that effort," Magee said. "All this legislation does is make it easier for a New York consumer to identify if, in fact, the milk they are purchasing was processed by a New York company."

This legislation came about from a personal experience Magee had while shopping. He picked up a gallon of milk in a grocery store near his home only to discover that there was no simple way to tell if the milk had been processed by a New York processor.

Magee noted that he is also working on similar legislation that would require retailers to display the country of origin on all meat and veal products as well as all vegetables and produce with, once again, one of the goals being to raise consumer awareness of where their agricultural products are coming from.

Ground Training For The Horse And Rider

DR. NANCY DIEHL
Assistant Professor of Equine Science and
BRIAN EGAN
Extension Assistant,
Horse Program

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Working a horse on the ground is an important training aid for both the horse and the rider. This crosses all disciplines and expectations for athletic performance. It is an exercise with value of its own, not just a hurdle to cross on the way to making the horse ready to ride. The experienced rider should use ground training as an opportunity to fine tune communication with the horse, and inexperienced riders in particular should use ground training as an opportunity to improve their comfort level with their horse and learn basic training cues.

Ground training really begins with handling the foal. It is not critical that the foal be handled in the first hour or even first days of life. However, the sooner the foal is handled — touched, haltered, led, etc. — the more opportunities he will have to learn before going on to more advanced training. Horses learn very well by repetition and this is often easier to accomplish when handling is started at a young age.

When the handler begins working with a weanling, yearling, or 2-year-old, he or she will begin to appreciate and use the horse's natural "flight zone" as the basics for much of the later work. In a broad sense, the flight zone can be determined by the distance a horse will allow a person to approach before turning or backing away and leaving. The more a horse is handled, the smaller the flight zone becomes. The biggest mistake a handler can make is to allow the flight zone to become too small.

Most horsemen know a "spoiled" horse that always wants to nose, nip, or otherwise pester when being handled; this is annoying at best and even dangerous at worst. It is clearly advantageous to preserve the natural respect a horse has for people, call it the person's dominance over the horse, if you will.

Round pen training is a wonderful way to learn to handle and train the young horse. The round pen is not new. It has been in use for years and years, though more recently it has been widely marketed by popular trainers. The round pen simply provides a safe, enclosed area where you can work a horse without a lead.

In round pen training, the handler can use his or her body to control the horse's speed and direction of movement, by influencing the horse's flight zone. For example, when the horse is circling at the perimeter of the round pen, the handler can step ahead of the horse's trajectory, entering his flight zone, which causes the horse to change direction. By making smaller movements just in front of or in line with the horse's shoulder, the handler will be encouraging the horse to move at a slower or faster speed, respectively. Later, when the horse is worked in hand, on a lead, similar positional changes by the handler will result in appropriate responses by the horse.

Along with controlling the horse with respect to its flight zone, the handler will use basic cues and training procedures which are simple, classical behavior modification techniques such as reward, positive reinforcement, negative reinforcement, and occasionally punishment. Positive reinforcement and reward are very similar in that the horse gets something it likes, such as a grain reward, for a correct response. Negative reinforcement is different than the image it creates — in fact, it simply means removing an aversive, annoying, or unpleasant stimulus when the horse does what he is expected to do. At Penn State, we refer to this as "pressure and release." "Pressure" can be in the form of a physical stimulus, such as a pull on a lead rope, or a spatial stimulus, such as infringing on the horse's flight zone.

When the horse responds correctly, such as by stepping forward to the pull or pressure on the lead, the handler immediately relaxes and this is the "release" (or the negative reinforcement). Using the spatial pressure example, when the handler moves forward towards the horse, into its flight zone, the horse should back up. As soon as the horse takes a step back, the handler stops moving forward, as the "release."

Horses will develop what we call a "conditioned response" to various forms of pressure stimuli. That is, the horse learns to respond quicker to subtler forms of pressure. When working a horse on the ground, eventually the handler will just need to move the hand that is holding the lead (and not apply any pull or pressure at all) and the horse will go in the desired direction. Another very common example of a conditioned response is the horse that learns the sequence of picking up his feet during grooming and seemingly complies so well by picking up the next foot before you get to it. When a horse walks, stops, turns, and even performs intricate dressage movements under saddle with no apparent cues by the handler, it appears magical, but really it's the beautiful crystallization of positive and negative reinforcement and conditioned responses.

For those with a primary focus on breeding horses, ground training is particularly critical with stallions. Much of the time when we are faced with a stallion that is unruly or unmanageable in the breeding shed, we find that one of the core problems is poor ground manners.

Our first approach to retraining an unruly stallion is establishing impeccable responses to cues from the handler to stop, back, and walk forward at a controlled pace, outside of the breeding context. Once again, we would use the horse's natural flight zone and positive and negative reinforcement principles. Once back in the breeding shed, the ultimate positive reinforcement is permitting the stallion to make progress toward the mare or breeding dummy. This retaining process also requires a handler who can differentiate between appropriate excitable and inappropriate unmanageable behavior for a stallion in the breeding shed. Conditioned responses can also work in our favor when we have a stallion with a dual career, e.g. breeding and showing. Stallions often learn which halter and lead are used for going to the breeding shed and which are used prior to tacking up for a ride, and will behave accordingly.

At Penn State, we value teaching these basic training and learning principles. We have a unified teaching program in equine science that includes courses in basic and advanced production and management, selection and judging, equine behavior, equine facilitated therapy, and handling and training. In each class, students are learning some of the important elements behind the horse's natural behavior and how we can influence that behavior appropriately, through training and also through good husbandry. The handling and training class dedicates nearly the whole semester to critical ground training techniques, which are so clearly of benefit to both the horse and the student of all skill levels.

Corn Growers Advance Ethanol In Nation's Energy Policy

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The nation's corn growers say ethanol deserves a leading role in emerging national energy policy because it delivers energy security, promotes environmental stewardship and revitalizes rural communities.

Lake Preston, S.D., farmer Lynn Jensen, chairman of the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA), testified yesterday before the House Agriculture Committee's Subcommittee on Conservation, Credit, Rural Development and Research.

Jensen provided an up-to-date portrayal of the U.S. ethanol industry, noting that given the uncertainty about this nation's energy supplies, the arguments promoting ethanol are compelling. He said the current cost of producing ethanol lies in the range of $0.95-1.10 per gallon and research shows that for every 100 BTUs of energy used to produce ethanol, 135 BTUs of ethanol are produced.

"Ethanol facilities are not only cost effective, they are energy efficient...Therefore, the myth that it takes more energy to produce a gallon of ethanol than is contained in the ethanol itself is just that: a myth," Jensen noted.

Citing research conducted by the Argonne National Laboratory, Jensen testified that ethanol produces 32 percent fewer emissions of greenhouse gasses than gasoline for the same distance traveled.

"Last year, ethanol production set a new record, utilizing more than 600 million bushels of corn, or about 6.5 percent of the crop to produce 1.63 billion gallons of fuel ethanol," Jensen explained. "Corn demand created by ethanol kept valuable farmland resources in production, adding as much as $3 billion to the income of our corn farmers."

The viability of the ethanol industry hinges in large part on government policy, he said, adding, "Given the uncertainty regarding how the Administration will respond to California's request for a waiver from the federal reformulated gasoline program (RFG), growers' investments in new ethanol plans are on hold."

Jensen suggested a two-track approach that achieves:

- The development of a comprehensive energy strategy that includes a renewable fuels requirement complementing the current oxygen requirement in the RFG program; and
- A comprehensive reauthorization of the Clean Air Act where new developments in fuel and vehicle technology "can be considered through the critical lens of analysis that our environmental policy demands. Such a course would provide the renewable fuels industry the necessary signals needed to attract additional investment while maintaining the environmental benefits of current law that has provided millions of Americans with cleaner air."

Jensen's complete testimony is posted on NCGA's Website at www.ncga.com.

DMS serves as the marketer of 10 billion pounds of raw milk produced annually by 6,000 combined members in the northeast.

"Sharad is an excellent addition to our operation," said Rick Smith, CEO of Dairylea Cooperative and of Dairy Farmers of America's Northeast Council. "He brings with him not only intimate knowledge of the industry, but admiration and respect from his peers. I am thrilled to have him on board."

Mathur comes to DMS with more than 20 years of experience in the dairy industry. He worked for Sunnydale Farms/Parmalat as a production supervisor, inventory controller, chief financial officer and, most recently, as director of country operations.

Young Farmers, Ranchers Should Participate In Farm Credit Survey

DENVER, Colo. — A current effort to capture information about of young farmers and ranchers — and their opinions — is important to the future of agriculture, according to Lynn Cornwell, president of the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA). The effort is being conducted as an internet survey by the Farm Credit System Foundation, Inc., and is worth the time of every young cattleman or woman, Cornwell says.

The 12-week internet survey is targeted at those farmers and ranchers who are 18-35 and/or have less than 10 years of experience. The deadline is June 1.

The survey can be accessed at www.surveyhost.net/barriers/barriers—1.htm. More information about the Farm Credit System Foundation can be found at www.fccouncil.com/fcsfound.

In addition, a link to the survey can be found on www.beef.org.

According to USDA census statistics there are 152,156 farmers between the ages of 18 and 35, but the FCS Foundation points out that the USDA only counts a farmer if that farmer is the most senior decision-maker for that operation. Junior partners or other owners of closely-held farming operations are not counted.

As a result, there are many young and beginning U.S. farmers and ranchers who are being ignored and facing barriers to success that are not being addressed.

"One of the seven key objectives I outlined when I became NCBA president was to improve the beef industry's ability to keep and attract talented young people," says Cornwell. 'I think this survey will provide crucial information from which we can determine what attracts people to our business, and what kinds of changes to programs and policies will get them to remain in it."

Estimated completion time for the survey is 25 minutes. As an incentive to complete it, the FCS Foundation is offering a chance to win an all-terrain vehicle of the participant's choice, valued up to $6,000, if contact information is included in the survey.

Data from the survey will be analyzed and made available broadly to policy makers in preparation for the next Farm Bill. It will also be used to provide an accurate and comprehensive demographic profile of young and beginning farmers and ranchers that does not exist today.

Horse Park Announces New Sponsors

ALLENTOWN, N.J. — The Horse Park of New Jersey has announced the addition of Hoober Incorporated and Kubota Tractors as corporate sponsors for the facility.

The 147 acre Horse Park of New Jersey at Stone Tavern, Inc. is a unique combination of private not-for-profit organizations and state government joining together to develop a world-class equine facility. The facility is located just off Interstate 195, approximately five miles from Exit 7A of the New Jersey Turnpike.

The newest addition to the park is the newly constructed 162-foot by 300-foot clear span building that may be used for exhibition purposes in bad weather and the winter months of the year.

Hoober Incorporated is a third-generation family owned farm business that began operation in Intercourse, in 1941. Since that time, they have added dealerships in Middletown, Del. and McAlisterville, and they sell and service tractors out of all three locations.

"We're really excited about this partnership with the Horse Park of New Jersey," said Don Beidler, who has been selling tractors for Hoober for 25 years.

As part of their sponsorship of the Horse Park of New Jersey, Hoober and Kubota have donated the use of an M9000, 80 HP tractor to be used at the horse park from May 1 through October 31 of this year.

Dickinson College Students Tour Poultry Farm

CARLISLE (Cumberland Co.) — A dozen Dickinson College students accompanied by Candi Wilderman, professor of environmental studies, expanded their knowledge of agriculture and its environmental strengths and challenges by touring Arlin Wadel's advanced layer-poultry farm outside of Shippensburg on Thursday, April 19.

Wadel's farm is family owned and operated with a contract relationship with Wenger's Feed Mill, Inc. According to Wadel, "I wouldn't have it any other way. Farming with a contract allows me to keep the farm in the family, and offers an opportunity for my six children to continue farming."

The Dickinson College students were dressed in plastic boots, hats and coveralls to comply with the strict bio security protocol required by the farmer to protect the birds from outside diseases. Bill Achor, environmental coordinator for Wenger's answered questions ranging from bird health to egg production.

Wadel emphasized that his 125,000-bird house, labeled advanced agriculture, is a cost effective, efficient means of producing quality, abundant and environmentally safe food.

Amendments For Honey Research, Promotion, And Consumer Information Order

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture is amending its honey research and promotion program to incorporate similar changes made in 1998 to the Honey Research, Promotion, and Consumer Information Act.

The amendments authorize the National Honey Board to develop a voluntary quality assurance program. The amendments eliminate the requirement for small companies to file for an exemption, add a requirement for producers to maintain certain records, and make several administrative changes to the program.

Research and promotion programs help to expand, maintain, and develop markets for individual agricultural commodities in the United States and abroad.

The secretary of agriculture appoints national boards to carry out these programs. The National Honey Board administers the honey program under the supervision of USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service.

The final rule implementing the amendments appeared in the May 1 Federal Register.

The final rule and amended order are posted at: www.ams.usda.gov/fv/rpdocketlist.htm. The amendments will become effective on May 31.

For additional information, contact Kathie Birdsell, USDA/AMS Stop 0244, 1400 Independence Ave. SW, Washington DC 20250-0244; telephone 202-720-4835; fax 202-205-2800; or e-mail: kathie.birdsell@usda.gov.

Nutrient Management Act Oversight Hearing Offered Comprehensive, Balanced Review, Bunt Says

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Testimony provided to the House Agricultural and Rural Affairs Committee at a public oversight hearing on Act 6 of 1993, the Nutrient Management Act, offered lawmakers and the public a balanced and comprehensive review of the act, Rep. Raymond Bunt Jr. (R-147), who chairs the committee, said recently.

"The farm, conservation, and environmental organizations that testified today presented the committee with a great deal of information and suggestions on Pennsylvania's nutrient management program," Bunt said.

"We determined that the most effective and informative approach would be to invite spokespersons for the various recognized groups and agencies.

"These include the groups that have been involved with the nutrient management issue from its onset more than a decade ago, the officials who administer the Nutrient Management Act, those who are directly impacted by compliance with the act and its regulations, and public groups with environmental concerns.

"This format gave the hearing balance and allowed each invited organization to add its recommendations and concerns to the committee's consideration of the act. We were pleased to find many areas of agreement between those parties."

Grain Sorghum Group Expands Washington, D.C. Representation

LUBBOCK, Texas — In an effort to advance the interests of grain sorghum producers on the legislative and regulatory front, National Grain Sorghum Producers (NGSP) is pleased to announce that it has retained the services of Paul Magliocchetti Associates (PMA), a Washington, D.C., based government relations firm specializing in agriculture. The agreement comes after the retirement of former NGSP Washington representative, Dan Shaw of World Perspectives, Inc.

"Grain sorghum farmers are now in a very critical period as we move forward in the 2002 Farm Bill process," said Leo Bindel, NGSP president and a producer from Sabetha, Kansas. "We look forward to working closely with PMA as we go to work on this important legislation."

Established in 1989 by Paul Magliocchetti after serving 20 years in the legislative branch of government, PMA has committed itself to being a leading resource for agricultural organizations seeking effective strategies and results.

PMA staff members working on behalf of sorghum producers include Fred J. Clark, a specialist in Farm Bill issues and other farm legislation; Timothy K. Sanders, whose expertise centers on agricultural appropriations, and Mark A. Rokala, who will concentrate on general legislative and regulatory issues.

NGSP represents U.S. grain sorghum producers nationwide. Headquartered in the heart of the U.S. sorghum belt at Lubbock, Texas, the organization works to increase the profitability of sorghum production through market development, research, education, and legislative representation.

'Triangle Series' Horse Show Results

NEW LONDON (Chester Co.) A day of beautiful weather brought a nice turnout of horses and riders for the first horse show of the Triangle Series, held Sunday, April 22, at Grazing Acres Farm in New London.

One of the new features of this year's series is a two-class division for junior medals (for riders 18 and under) featuring two jumping classes. The first class has two-foot six-inch fences. The second class, a two-foot class, is jumped without stirrups.

First champion under this format was Bethany Moore, Landenberg, riding Indian Jane. The reserve championship in the western division also went to Bethany Moore.

Reserve champion in junior medals was Leanne Buckley, Atglen, riding Knights Rebel. This pair also took the reserve championship of the advanced short stirrup division.

Other Triangle Series format changes for the 2001 year include moving the western division to the first division of the day and increasing the height of the low hunter fences to two-foot nine-inches for horses and two-foot three-inches for ponies.

The first low hunter champion under the higher fences was One Last Trick, ridden by Taylor Marcus, West Grove. Reserve champion was Center of Attention, ridden by James Marcus, Taylor's father, making this division a real family affair.

A second family win occurred during the day when Champion Pleasure Pony was awarded to Midnight Quest, ridden by Alexandra Brunovszky, West Chester, and reserve champion went to Without a Doubt, ridden by her sister Lauren Brunovszky. Alexandra Brunovszky was the top money winner for the day, followed closely by Devon Steen. Pleasure and Hunter Classes offer cash prizes.

Championship of the western division went to Eagles First Luv, shown by Lauren DiNenno, West Grove. This pair also took the championship of the pleasure horse division, which was the largest division at this show.

Four farms are currently participating in the Triangle Series. Call any one for a prize list and show dates:

Grazing Acres: (610)255-5009;

KA Equestrian Center in Cochranville: (610) 869-0746;

Shady Home in Oxford: (610) 932-8028; and

Fox Meadow in Unionville: (610) 444-8805.

The next show in the series is Sunday, May 13, at KA Equestrian Center.

Brian Bradley of Newark, Del., was the judge for the April 22 show.

The leadline champion was Hunter Tomlinson riding Royal Ria. Reserve Champion was Christine Jameson of Kennett Square riding One Last Trick.

Emily Shaffer of West Grove riding Low Down Louie was champion of both the beginner rider and the beginner short stirrup divisions. Reserve champion of the beginner rider division was Beth Peters riding Sprint for the Rainbow. Reserve champion beginner rider was Jenny Knauss of Taylor Lane, Kennett Square, riding Extremely Nosey.

In the mini mini division (for riders aged 8 and under) the champion was Kaitlyn Jackson riding Her Majestic. Reserve champion was Anthony DiNenno riding Eagles First Luv. For the mini division, riders 10 and under, the champion was Brianne Allen riding OLS Melanie. Reserve champion was Jenna DiNenno riding Angel.

For advanced short stirrup (riders 12 and Under) the championship went to Kelly Jordan of New London riding Stroke of Midnight. Sister Lindsey Jordan, riding Suddenly Sube, took the championship of the open equitation division (for riders 13 and Up), with the reserve championship going to Sara Schaefer, New London, riding Bally Vae Bay.

Zophirushah, ridden by Devon Steen of New London, was the champion of the baby green hunter division. Reserve champion was Flashy Girl, ridden by Belinda Manchio of Cochranville.

CLEAN AND GREEN: WHAT YOU DON'T KNOW CAN HURT YOU

Owners of Pennsylvania farmland may be able to achieve significant reductions in their real estate taxes through preferential assessment under Act 319, commonly known as "Clean and Green." Under the Act, agricultural land is assessed at its current use value for agriculture, which in most cases is much lower than its fair market value.

Land in agricultural use must have been producing an agricultural commodity or have been in a soil conservation program agreement for three years preceding the application, and must either be 10 or more contiguous acres, or have an anticipated yearly gross agricultural production income of at least $2,000 from the production of an agricultural commodity.

Landowners wishing to enroll their property for the 2002 tax year must submit an application to their county assessment office by June 1, 2001 to be eligible.

Clean and Green is good news for most Pennsylvania farmers, but it can also be a trap for the unwary if the application process is not carefully thought out beforehand, or if the rules of the Act are not followed. The Act imposes "rollback taxes," plus six percent simple interest, for up to the seven previous years if the landowner changes the use of the property or splits off a portion in a way that is not allowed by the regulations. Rollback taxes are the difference between the taxes paid based on the preferential assessment and the taxes that would have been paid otherwise.

For example, a landowner may "split off" up to two acres per year (up to a maximum of 10 acres or 10 percent of the property, whichever is less) for a residential use. However, if the landowner splits off more than two acres in one year, he is liable for rollback taxes and interest on the entire parent tract that was on the original application.

A landowner may also make a "separation" of an enrolled tract into two or more tracts, as long as both tracts still qualify, without triggering rollback taxes. However, if the owner of either of the separated tracts subsequently changes the use of that tract within seven years of the separation so that it no longer qualifies, the owner who changed the use is liable for rollback taxes and interest on the entire original tract. If the change in use occurs more than seven years after the separation, rollback taxes are only due on the tract on which the use was changed.

The Act allows up to two acres of enrolled land to be used for "direct commercial sales of agriculturally related products and activities" without triggering rollback taxes on that land. The Act also provides for other "rural enterprises" that could be performed on enrolled land and trigger rollback taxes on only the area used for the rural enterprise. Again, in either of the above instances, the landowner must be careful not to exceed the size or use restriction, or he could face rollback taxes on the entire property. Any sale, change in use, separation, split off of Clean and Green Property requires 30 days advance written notification to the county assessment office.

Recent changes to Clean and Green by Act 156 of 1998 and the resulting regulations have clarified some questions and made the Act more uniformly favorable to farmers across the state. For example, Act 156 prevents counties from establishing "base acres" with higher assessed values within Clean and Green tracts. It also requires that counties assess farm buildings at the value they actually contribute to the farm, not at replacement cost or some other arbitrary value, and eliminates the ability of counties to impose additional requirements as a condition for enrollment. The new law clarifies that rollback taxes are not triggered by merely the transfer of property, but rather only if the new owner actually changes the use. It also clarifies that in the case of a split off tract where a new owner changes the use of the split off tract, it is the new owner, not the original owner, who is liable for the rollback taxes and interest that will be assessed on the entire original property.

Clean and Green is a good deal for most Pennsylvania farmers. Many of the problems and pitfalls mentioned above can be avoided by a thorough understanding of the rules and by careful planning at the application stage, for instance, by making separate applications for separately deeded tracts in order to minimize the scope of rollback taxes should it be necessary to change the use. If you are unsure whether Clean and Green is right for you, or if you are already enrolled and are thinking of selling all or part of your property, you should seek professional advice before continuing.

Proposed Legislation Would Prohibit Destruction of Research Crops

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — To prevent vandalism that can potentially delay important agricultural projects for years, Rep. Raymond Bunt Jr. has introduced legislation making it illegal to intentionally destroy crops grown for testing or research purposes.

"In an effort to advance their agenda, the opponents of agricultural biotechnology have destroyed crops involved in private and public research field trials," said Bunt, who chairs the Pennsylvania House Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee.

"This destruction can set back the timetable of research projects, denying people the benefits resulting from crop research, including improved food quality and added economic value for farm families."

"While Pennsylvania so far has avoided crop destruction of this type, research is an important part of our state's agriculture industry, which is responsible for $44 billion in economic activity. We can't afford to let our guard down — destruction in the name of protest is inappropriate and should not be tolerated."

Bunt's legislation consists of two bills. House Bill 1493 adds a section to the state's crimes code to make it a felony of the second degree to intentionally and knowingly damage any field crop grown for personal or commercial purposes or for research or testing use by a public or private agency. Persons who are convicted may also be sentenced to pay restitution, attorney fees and court costs.

House Bill 1492 allows the victims of agricultural crop destruction to pursue civil remedies to recover the cost of the damaged crops. Damages available would be limited to three times the market value of the crop prior to its damage plus three times the actual damages for production research, testing, replacement and crop development costs.

The bills will be reviewed by a House standing committee.

Soybean Association Cites Need For Biodiesel Fuels

SAINT LOUIS, Mo. — The American Soybean Association (ASA) presented testimony to Congress recently that proposed a two-pronged approach to support biodiesel. ASA is asking that as much as two percent of all motor fuels sold in the United States be required to include either biodiesel or ethanol, and proposing a tax exemption that would make biodiesel more price competitive.

"Our initiative would provide the United States with more homegrown energy and help our nations farmers by fostering markets for our surplus commodities, such as vegetable oil," said ASA Executive Committee Member Ron Heck of Perry, Iowa, who gave the testimony before the House Agriculture Conservation, Credit, Rural Development and Research Subcommittee. "ASA's two-part plan supports cleaner-burning fuels for everyone, reduces dependence on foreign energy sources and provides a much-needed boost to farm prices and rural economies."

Biodiesel is commonly produced from soybean oil, which is currently in surplus and depresses the price of soybeans and other oilseeds. It contains no petroleum, but it can be blended easily with diesel to offer environmental, energy security and economic development benefits. Biodiesel is popular in Europe where motorists use 250 million gallons annually. According to the National Biodiesel Board, U.S. biodiesel producers are expected to manufacture 20 million gallons in fiscal year 2001, a four-fold increase from last year.

Strong public support is essential to develop the biodiesel market since U.S. culture and policies are focused on petroleum products. Therefore, ASA and the National Corn Growers Association are proposing that renewable fuels, such as biodiesel and ethanol, should constitute as much as two percent of the U.S. motor fuel market over the next 10 years. The policy would be part of a flexible and user-friendly national fuels program that would gradually increase federal renewable fuel content requirements.

ASA's recommendation for a biodiesel tax incentive would provide a partial exemption to the diesel fuel excise tax similar to the partial tax exemption for ethanol. The amount of the exemption would be three cents for diesel fuel that contains two percent biodiesel. This approach is similar to the partial tax exemption for ethanol, which provides a 5.4 percent exemption for gasoline that contains 10 percent ethanol. (Biodiesel and ethanol are complementary renewable fuels since they are sold in separate fuel markets.)

The proposal would boost farm prices and save taxpayer dollars. Every 100 million gallons of biodiesel requires 760 million pounds of a feedstock, such as vegetable oils, recycled grease or animal fats. If soybean oil were the only feedstock used, 100 million gallons of biodiesel would reduce by one-third the current surplus of 2.1 billion pounds of soy oil. Reducing soy oil supplies by this amount would increase the U.S. soy oil price by an estimated 1.5 cents per pound. With 11 pounds of soy oil in a bushel of soybeans, this would raise U.S. soybean prices by as much as 16.5 cents per bushel.

The proposal would save taxpayer dollars because ASA is proposing to reimburse the Federal Highway Trust Fund through the U.S. Department of Agricultures Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC). The cost to the CCC would be offset, at least initially, by the savings from increased biodiesel sales that would reduce government expenditures under the soybean marketing loan program.

For example, if 100 million gallons of biodiesel were used under this program, it would be blended at two percent per gallon into five billion gallons of diesel fuel. At a cost of three cents per gallon, the cost of the program would be $150 million. Reduced soybean oil surpluses will result in higher soybean prices, and raising soybean prices in the marketplace would reduce CCC outlays under the soybean marketing loan program. Using a conservative 13 cents per bushel impact on price, the cost savings on this years estimated 3.0 billion bushel soybean crop would be $390 million. As a result, the proposal will save more than two dollars for each dollar it costs.

Furthermore, biodiesel users and the public would benefit from the fuels many operational and environmental benefits. In particular, biodiesel can increase the lubricity of diesel, which is of particular benefit when the sulfur content of diesel is reduced. Independent studies also show that the use of biodiesel in conventional diesel engines results in a substantial reduction of pollutants, including carbon dioxide. Additional information on the attributes of biodiesel is available at www.biodiesel.org

Research Snapshots

• A new oral vaccine against bovine respiratory disease, a disease that costs the beef industry $1 billion annually, has had promising results.

Developed by USDA scientists, the vaccine also increased initial weight gain in the feedlot, and protection occurred 4 days after vaccination as compared to the current 10-14 days with injectable vaccines.

• Beef cow nutrition in the last 60 days prior to calving has long been known to influence calf survival and reproductive efficiency of the cow.

One reason for this is that the incidence of calf scours are reduced when cows are fed properly during this critical period. Often over-looked by producers, weather conditions during late winter for spring-calving cows can be cold, wet, windy, and muddy.

All of these conditions increase the nutritional requirements of the cow, reports author Dr. Clell Bagley from Utah State University.

Persistent poor conditions, particularly for cattle that are wet, exposed to wind, and subjected to subfreezing temperatures, will increase the incidence of scours in young calves. Producers end up playing "catch-up "with their nutritional program.

Reduce calf scour problems by knowing the requirements for energy and protein for the cows in the herd, adjust these "book" values for the conditions on the farm, and know the concentration of these nutrients in the feed and forage provided to be sure an adequate supply is available.

• Round bale hay feeders vary greatly in feed wastage according to Michigan State University scientists (Buskirk and others). Their work indicates the most effective feeder is the inverted cone with a solid base.

For this feeder, waste was measured at 3.5 percent (our work at Penn State found this to be 2.8 percent.) Conventional ring feeders with a solid band at the bottom had 6.1 percent wastage, and a feeding trailer had 11.4 percent wastage.

The greatest wastage (14.6 percent) was from a cradle-type platform feeder. When calculating the amount of hay you are feeding to cows, do not forget to reduce the intake by the wastage that will occur based on the feeder that is used.

• The first draft of the Nation Non-Fed Beef Quality Audit indicates among cull cows and bulls, 21.6 percent of all carcasses have major to extreme trim loss due to bruising. This results in trim of 5 to 15 pounds per carcass.

These losses are caused by poor management and handling practices. The total value of carcass losses from all causes averaged $68.82 per head.

• The average cost of gain for fed cattle in Pennsylvania is about $.10 per pound of gain higher than their counterparts in the High Plains ($.53 per pound versus $.43 per pound) according to a recent presentation by Harold Harpster of Penn State and Jim Hogue of Agri-Basics, Inc.

These authors did not find a difference in feed cost, so the higher cost for Eastern feeders was attributed to lower feed efficiency from producing heavier and fatter carcasses.

This implies the quality-conscious Pennsylvania feeder must receive $40-$60 more per carcass in quality or other premiums to be as competitive as the Western feeder.

• Increasing feed intake by five percent and feed efficiency by 10 percent has the same effect on net returns for cattle feeders as a Choice/Select spread of $10/CWT of carcass according to T.M. Peters (1996).

Feeders may not have control over the price spread on quality grades, but they have complete control over bunk management, sourcing feeder cattle, the use of additives and implants, and feeding conditions that influence feed intake and efficiency.

County Of Origin Labeling Update

Country of origin labeling for all meat products has divided the meat and livestock industry in recent months.

Packers, especially those who manufacture ground beef, are at a loss as to how such labeling might be accomplished. Many processors import lean boneless beef to blend with fatter beef trimmings from fabrication operations to make leaner products in demand by today's consumers.

Other packers located near the Canadian or Mexican borders process animals shipped across the border and all meat is blended together to make finished products.

Ground beef is especially difficult to track since meat from hundreds of carcasses might be blended together in one batch. This makes it impossible to track products made exclusively from U.S. beef.

Further, packers question whether feeder cattle from Mexico must be labeled as imported. Since these cattle come from feedlots where pens of cattle may come from many different sources, it would be a nightmare for these records to follow the cattle.

USDA: "Costly and Useless"

USDA reported to Congress its findings related to the possible mandatory country of origin labeling of meat and meat products.

The 39-page report concluded in part that "the major costs associated with new country of origin labeling requirements are related to the cost of segregating and preserving imported product identity "and that cost, although unknown,"could be significant."

The direct cost of labels range from $500,000 for imported muscle cuts at grocery stores to $8 million if all muscle cuts are labeled. Furthermore, "a requirement for mandatory country of origin labeling could have a potentially damaging effect on United States exports of beef and other commodities.

Finally, there's no evidence consumers are willing to pay more for meat to have it labeled with the country of origin.

"To the contrary, if consumers do distinguish goods depending on their country of origin, strong incentive exists for industries to act without government intervention."

Some American producers have been pushing Congress to require such labeling as a way to curb imports of Canadian cattle, but, according to a Associated Press report, labeling meat could cost the industry $1 billion a year.

A coalition of leading food industry trade organizations welcomed the findings of the USDA study.

"The report confirms that mandatory meat labeling proposals, including those currently pending in Congress, are expensive, difficult to enforce, and serve no useful purpose," commented coalition spokesman Tim Hammonds, president and CEO of the Food Marketing Institute.

The National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA) has supported such labeling, with the intent that it will protect U.S. beef from imports. Packers Informal Working Groups organized by Food Marketing Institute and the National Cattlemen's Beef Association recently met to explore alternatives to legislation that would impose mandatory country-of-origin labeling on meat products.

Currently being discussed are options focusing on whether a voluntary, fee-for-service program could work and, if so, how should "domestic beef "be defined.

Beef:Made In The USA

The latter question is one that FSIS and the Agricultural Marketing Service have also been studying. Meeting on Mar. 13, working groups from the two agencies outlined their requirements for geographic labeling claims. AMS provided information on its "Beef: Made in the USA" program, still under development.

The verification process for USA beef looks a lot like FSIS requirements.

To qualify for the "Beef: Made in the USA" program, beef products must develop a written system which:

- Permanently identifies animals at farm or ranch of birth.
- Establishes an auditable document trail to ensure traceability to farm or ranch of birth.
- Is self-monitored through an internal auditing system.
- Ensures all persons with responsibilities relating to the program know and follow program requirements.

Proposal Reflects Concerns

Responding to requests by producer groups to discontinue carcass grading, USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service (AMS) issued an Advance Notice of Proposed Rulemaking in January.

Among the options being considered are 1) The elimination of imported carcass grading or

2) Grading with the provision that the country of origin mark be maintained with the grade mark or

3) Consider imported carcasses the same as domestic ones and eliminate the requirements to designate country of origin labeling.Comments were due by Apr. 3.

BASF Pledges Use Of Ethanol In Company Cars

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. — The BASF Corporation announced a new company ethanol initiative at the National Corn Growers Association Awards Dinner, held Feb. 26 at Commodity Classic in San Antonio.

According to Rick Van Genderen, U.S. business manager for BASF and guest speaker at the banquet, John Rabby, BASF group vice president, North America, has asked all employees with company cars to seek out and patronize only outlets that sell ethanol blended gasoline. Employees are also being encouraged to use ethanol in their personal cars.

In the memo announcing the initiative to North American sales and marketing employees of BASF, Rabby wrote, "As one of the world's leading agriculture input companies, it is vital to our long-term success to prove our leadership on many fronts that concern our ultimate customers, the farmers.

In a time of high corn surplus and historically low corn prices, we must not only voice our support for corn producers, but also show it with our checkbooks."

The production of ethanol currently utilizes 600 million bushels of corn and is blended with an estimated two percent of all gasoline fuels. In 2000, BASF employees with company vehicles logged over 10 million miles. "We can make an impact," said Van Genderen. "As an industry leader, BASF views this effort as an important step in advancing the value and price of our customers' commodities."

The BASF Agricultural Products business in North America, Crop Protection Products Department, markets a range of innovative crop protection materials and systems that enable growers to increase their cost-efficiency as well as their crop yield potential. Its headquarters are in Research Triangle Park, N.C. It is a unit of the BASF Global Agricultural Products Division located in Mount Olive, N.J.

BASF is a return-focused global company generating long-term growth and profitability from its activities in chemicals, nutrition, and oil and gas. The company's product range includes high-value chemicals, plastics, dyestuffs, dispersions, automobile and industrial coatings, crop protection products, fine chemicals, crude oil and natural gas. BASF's approach to integration, known in German as "Verbund," is one of the company's particular strengths and provides a unique competitive advantage. With sales in 2000 of 36 billion euros and a workforce of about 105,000 employees, BASF is one of the world's top chemical companies. USDA Reports Benefits Of Farm-To-School Alliances

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The USDA recently issued a report on "How Local Farmers and School Food Service Buyers Are Building Alliances."

The report summarizes the discussions and findings of the USDA-sponsored Small Farm/ School Meals Initiative Southeast Regional Workshop, conducted May 1 in Georgetown, Ky. The report can be viewed at USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service Website at http://www.ams.usda.gov/tmd/mta/publications.htm.

The report notes that 94 percent of all farms in the U.S. can be categorized as small or limited-resource farms, grossing less than $250,000 annualy. To enhance the earning potential of these farms, AMS has taken steps to facilitate direct marketing between small and limited-resource agricultural producers and local school districts.

The report addresses the importance and benefits of farm-to-workshop marketing, product preferences of the school food service buyer, factors that influence a school food service buyer's choice of vendor, potential barriers faced by the small producer, recommended approaches for breaking into the school food service market, and case studies of successful farm-to-school marketing initiatives. While the report's focus is on the experience of small farmers and school food service directors in Kentucky, North Carolina, the Florida Panhandle, and Southern California, many of their experiences may apply to other regions fo the country.

Copies of the report may be requested from Debra Tropp, AMS transportation and Marketing Programs, USDA STOP 0266, 1400 Independence Ave. SW., Washington, DC 20250-0266, (202) 720-2704, fax (202) 690-4948, or e-mail Debra.Tropp@usda.gov.

Lehman Earns Top Awards

Heather Lehman of Mechanicsburg received a surprise award at the Poultry Science banquet. Professor and poultry department head, Robert Elkin, presented Heather with the 2001 Bryce Jordan Student Leadership Award offered by the College of Ag Sciences. Earlier in the year, Heather received the Outstanding Student of the Year Award at the International Poultry Exposition in Atlanta, Ga. After graduation, Heather will work as a research biologist for Merck.

of the industry — from the egg to packaging — to control the quality of our product," Perdue said.

Today, Perdue sees $2.5 billion in sales with 20 operating plants in 13 states.

"Our goals are people (safety and retention), products, and profitability," Perdue said. Perdue operates wellness centers for employees as an early intervention program.

Perdue listed and explained five issues affecting today's poultry industry — consolidation, globalization, food safety, environmental issues, and providing value-added food to respond to the consumer's needs.

Perdue said his company is looking for students with a strong work ethic and good teamwork skills and who are caring and willing to learn.

Fundraiser Supports

"It's our responsibility to impact policies," he said.

Proceeds from the fundraising dinner are used to support state legislative candidates of both major political parties in future elections. The FARMER committee reviews each candidate's voting record, performance, and evaluates stance regarding support of agriculture legislative.

Farmers are urged to give input on endorsement as plans will soon be formulated for support, according to Marlene Reese, board chairman.

FARMER takes a bipartisan approach by alternating between Democratic and Republican officials as speakers for the annual dinner, which is its main fund-raising event.

This year, Pennsylvania Auditor General Robert P. Casey Jr., as the featured speaker, expressed his gratitude for PFB's caring response to the illness and death of his dad, former Governor Robert Casey Sr., who passed away last May.

Casey recounted his father's support to agriculture through passing legislation on farmland preservation, drought payments, animal health issues, student loans and forgiveness programs, and the Nutrient Management Act.

Although his dad's strong effort for local tax reform did not turn out well, Casey said, "It was the right thing to do."

Casey urged the audience to do the right thing and have faith in God, life, people, and a positive outlook in order to live successful lives.

As an elected official facing a race for state governorship next year, Casey said that he seeks advice from farmers on ag issues. He said that he supports farmers and their right to farm and to take advantage of technological opportunities.

A quote by Thomas Jefferson in 1821 continues to be thought provoking and true, Casey said: "When we direct from Washington when to sow and when to reap, we will soon need bread."

According to Casey, farmers are the best people to determine legislation that affects them.

"Agriculture will be a major player in Pennsylvania's future," Casey said. It is his desire to see profit margins kept high and a challenge to target dollars to agriculture for overall economical development strategy.

His father's and grandfather's life, Casey said, are examples of lives lived quietly and triumphantly. They did their work, paid taxes, raised children, and lived a life of fulfillment.

"We must do more to enable more families to attain lives of fulfillment," Casey said. "Our job and obligation as legislators is to create an environment where families can succeed, grow, and stay in Pennsylvania."

New Trustees Elected To Holstein Board

BRATTLEBORO, Vt. — David Pierson, chairman of the Holstein Foundation board, has announced that Calvin Covington, CEO of Southeast Milk, Inc., and Tom Morris, registered Holstein sales manager and auctioneer and publisher of Cattle Connection, have been elected unanimously to serve as members of the Holstein Foundation board. They will assume their new responsibilities at the June 28 meeting of the Holstein Foundation board in Cedar Rapids, Iowa.

Prior to his current position as CEO of Southeast Milk, Inc., Covington served as executive secretary and chief executive officer of American Jersey Cattle Association-National All-Jersey Inc. In addition to his board service with the Holstein Foundation, Covington is also a director of National Dairy Shrine, a director of Ocala/Marion County Chamber of Commerce, and a director, Advantage Dairy Group.

Morris is a registered Holstein sales manager and auctioneer. During the past 20 years, the Morris organization has managed several hundred Holstein sales across America, as well as in Canada and Europe. The World Classic at the World Dairy Expo in Madison, Wis. has been under their management for more than a dozen years and they have been selected to conduct their seventh National Holstein Convention Sale next year in Atlantic City, N.J.

Kids Korner

Gabriel Martin, son of Doug and Lydia Martin of Leola, says, "Hello," to a Jacob lamb. The lamb is an orphan triplet that needs to be fed sheep's milk substitute with a bottle. The lamb is learning to eat grass and run with the rest of the flock. Curiosity sometimes leads to naughtiness, because the lamb likes to nibble on flowers much to the chagrin of its owners, Dave and Katrina Lefever. The Lefevers say that historians believe that the Jacob breed started about 3,000 years ago in the Middle East. The breed name is taken from the Bible story of Jacob's flock of spotted sheep. This horned breed first came to the United States from Britain in the beginning 1900s. Photo by Jeff Martin.

Springtime Comes To The Farm

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

BERNVILLE (Berks Co.) — Warm breezes are finally here to stay — Jaylene Lesher hopes.

The six-year-old is the reigning Berks County Little Dairy Miss. Despite that big title and the work of promoting the goodness of milk, Jaylene is just like any other six-year-old.

"I like to play outside, wear shorts, and run to see John Henry, my horse," she said.

Jaylene also likes to ride bike, climb trees, swing, feed the ducks, boat on the pond, and help on the farm.

Springtime on the Lesher farm is a busy time. In addition to milking 100 cows, and plowing and planting about 320 acres, the whole family helps operate Way-Har Dairies and promote dairy products.

Jaylene is the fourth generation of her family to live on their Bernville farm. Her great grandfather purchased the farm in 1952. Her dad William grew up on the farm. "I never wanted to do anything else than farm," William said.

Most of the cows on the farm are Holsteins, about 20 of them are Jerseys, but Jaylene also has an Ayrshire, and her brother Josh, 8, has a Brown Swiss. Her sister Laura, 5, hopes to become dairy princess someday.

"I'm teaching her to say big words," Jaylene said.

Laura pronounces big words quite well. She also likes to say the following poem:

"I'm a little farm girl through and through.

I help milk cows and they say, 'mooo.'

I like ice cream and drink my milk too.

Three glasses a day for me and you."

Much to the delight of audiences, Jaylene sings a song about milk and ice cream whenever she promotes milk before audiences.

During her reign, Jaylene as made 57 school appearances, more than any former Little Miss in Berks County. She often shows students how to make butter by using her grandmother's glass butter churn. Jaylene's favorite activity as the Little Miss was to ride in parades.

"Sometimes I ride on a float or a big car," Jaylene said. Her favorite was riding on a fire truck with Santa Claus.

She also got to throw out the first pitch at the Reading Phillies game during Clover Farms Night, and presented trophies at a Nascar Raceway.

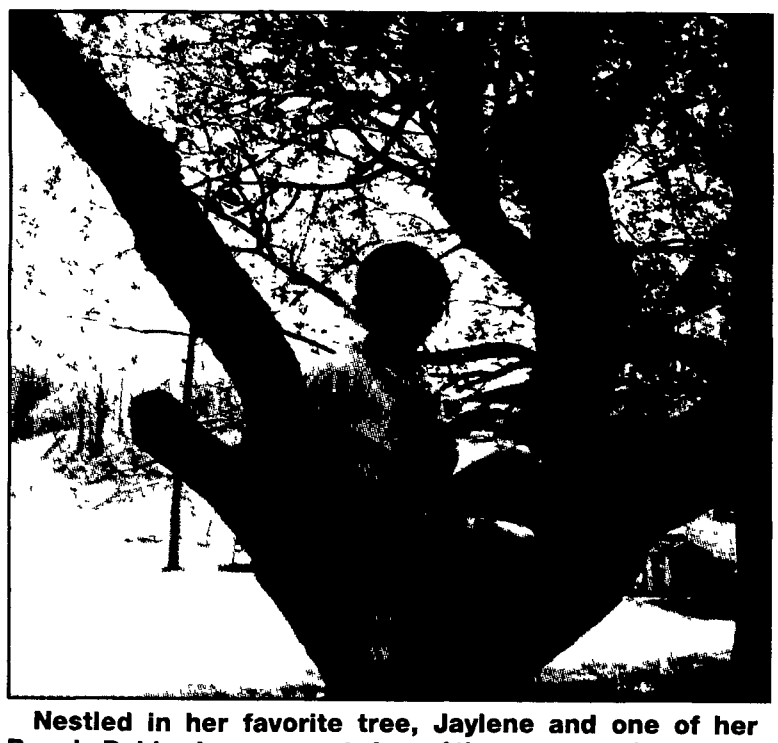
Jaylene's parents and even her grandpa took turns taking Jaylene to promotions. One of her favorite places to go is with her dad to Washington D.C. Once a year, they operate an ice

(Turn to Page B15)

After a day of running, jumping, and riding bikes, it's time to cool off with glasses of milk, cheese and crackers. From left are Laura, Jaylene, and a friend April Stauffer.



Nestled in her favorite tree, Jaylene and one of her Beanie Babies have a great view of the countryside.

Springtime is busy for the Lesher family, who milk 100 cows, farm several hundred acres, and run a dairy store. William and Lolly Lesher with daughters, Jaylene, 6, and Laura, 5, and son Josh, 8, (missing from the photo due to school) strive to find time to enjoy springtime on the farm.

Clothes flapping in the breeze absorb the fresh smells of a warm spring day.

On Being a Farm Wife

Green.

Smooth expanse of velvety-textured, emerald carpet. Evenly mowed, uniform in color, bordered by clusters of tulip blooms, nodding in the breeze, cherry clumps of red, yellow, pink.

The lawn of early May.

Lots of lawns of early May. All those lawns I admire in passing, attractively landscaped, resplendent with flowering trees and carefully pruned shrubs and planters already filled with blooming plants.

Rough, ragged, uneven. Somewhat reminiscent of a construction site. A work in progress.

Our lawn of early May.

It seems nearly every spring, some disruption or project we have under way entails having equipment all over the lawn. One year, it was cleanup and leveling where a pair of willows — planted when the kids were both little — had toppled over. One just fell over on a calm, sunny day, the other soon crashed in a windstorm, like long-married couples who pass away within days or weeks of each other.

Another year, it was tearing up a branch of the underground tile drainage system which originates at the edge of the lawn. Or cleaning out a buildup of road gravel from a storm culvert under the road which dumps at another edge. Or when we had to redo the springhouse area after manure storage construction.

This year, it is restructuring some lawn features for safer play areas for our beloved "little folks" who hang out here. In order to do so, The Farmer had to open a section of the yard fence and drive in with tractors and...and well, there goes the lawn.

You rarely find "lawn slaves" on farms. Not with all the more pressing field demands of the crop season. Rye is growing inches-per-day and must be cut, chopped and packed into the bunker silo in a very small window of optimum nutrient value — like a couple of days. Otherwise, forget it, since it will quickly turn old, tough, stemmy and worthless for cattle feed. Harvesting and ensiling of high-protein fresh alfalfa haylage has to follow close behind, and on almost as tight a schedule.

Corn fields also await timely planting, to be followed by soybeans, and grass hay and early grain harvest. And, then it's time to cut alfalfa again. All this dependent — naturally — on the whims of weather, which can play havoc with the whole spring schedule.

Thus, our lawn should feel privileged to get a weekly ride-over with the mower; it's a bonus if I can get the thick swaths of clippings raked for mulch before the grass starts pushing up through them, like forgotten hay. Dandelions, their yellow heads lopped off one day, poke up new ones the next day to taunt us until the next mower pass-over.

And, escaped heifers — May invariably brings a few seeking the greener grass on the outside of the fence — always manage to find the freshly-trimmed lawn and leave their "calling cards," natural fertilizer to further encourage the grass. So we carefully watch what we plant in beds and borders. Even surrounded by lots of lush lawn grass, those girls will zero in on and nibble any plant even slightly toxic to bovine bellies.

Glancing out a kitchen window one morning last week, I spied a strange, brown shape at the far upper corner of the lawn. Binoculars confirmed it was a bunny — but standing up on it's haunches, ears perked high. It stayed there, like a statue, for a long time, looking for all the world like a chocolate rabbit in an Easter candy display.

We guess that the watchful rabbit is a mama, guarding a nest of babies she has tucked somewhere in the tall grass of that corner. Handy, too, to where she can nibble fresh goodies from the garden. We prefer baby bunnies to beet tops, so that corner of the lawn has been declared off-limits to lawn mowing.

Another section of lawn going scruffy.

So the border must be redone where the equipment came through — but first we have to move a few large bank retaining timbers — and move in some more wood chip mulch under a big willow at the pond — and finish picking the rocks and smoothing the soil for reseeding some grass.

Some days it would be tempting to just let it all grow up.

If we encourage enough bunnies, they can keep it mowed for us.

What Kind Of Sports Parent Are You?

'Tis the season to go to youth soccer, baseball, softball, and T-ball games. The children are all excited to be outside playing and getting involved in an organized team sport. Are the parents prepared as well?

The atmosphere set by organizations, parents, and coaches is a major factor in determining whether or not youth will have a positive experience in a sports program.

A "win-at-all-costs" atmosphere can be harmful to a developing youth. The goal should be for parents to foster a positive climate that enables their children involved in sports to enjoy themselves and reach their full potential. Does this mean that all children should be considered potential future professional athletes?

Should we as parents make this our goal and strive to achieve this? I guess you will have to decide what is best for your children, but you may want to consider some things before you make the sport experience a "win-at-all-costs" situation.

Competition in itself is not bad. It can serve as a means of social comparison, necessary for adolescents to see how they are unique from others. Taken to the extreme, however, competition can cause individuals to act in ways that are unacceptable and unsportsmanlike. In other words, the mildest mannered parent can become a screaming demon during a sporting event. We have all witnessed this first hand. Some of us have been guilty as well. We just seem to get caught up in it.

When coaches and parents teach their kids that winning is everything, the ugliness comes out in everyone.

Parents should seek out programs that emphasize cooperation and mastery of skills during childhood and youth. A mastery perspective allows the young athlete to accept failures and learn from them, as well as to focus on improvement and not just on winning.

Competition should be introduced gradually during this early period. For example, T-ball is often used for this introductory period for Little League beginners. All children get to bat during each inning. Everyone plays in the field. In essence, everyone gets a turn no matter what. There is no fast pitcher, just a ball placed on a batting T.

There is a major attitude difference in the spectators and the youth participating. Spectators smile, talk, and laugh with each other. Children smile, laugh, and have a great time while playing.

We tend to leave the competitive stress factor along the road on the way to the game. But even in this seemingly wonderful environment of playing ball, I still have observed a parent keeping track of all their children's statistics as to where they hit the ball, how many times they caught it, and so forth. I could never understand what the purpose is for this.

Will they go home and review the statistics and try to improve their game? It's only T-ball and no one keeps score or at least they are not supposed to. Can't we as parents just give our young children a small break and let them have fun without being accountable as to how well they may or may not have played the game? At this level, it is supposed to be about learning skills.

Parents are most visibly supportive in their role as spectators on the sidelines for youth sports. As a parent I am very excited and want to see my children play; however, it is important that I keep my emotions under control and set a positive example. Here are some things for all parents to remember:

• Applaud and cheer for everyone on the team, not just your children. The parents sitting beside you appreciate it when you cheer for their children as well. This helps set up a "team" feeling among parents and helps decrease individual competition between parents.

• Avoid insulting other team members and those of the opposing team. This is very upsetting to your children and the parents sitting around you. Do you want other people insulting your children if they are having a bad game?

Think about it; as my children would say to me, "Mom, if you can't say anything nice— 'Zip it!'"

• Talk to the parents of the other team members. You don't have to become best friends, but you will automatically bond one way or another for the next 10 years. The reality is that most of these kids are more than likely going to be in most of the same sports until they graduate from high school. You will also see the same parents from the opposing teams at each event as well. This is a time for friendly bonding, not an opportunity for long-term alienation. We have to all live together as a team including the parents.

• Be respectful of the officials during the game. After the game, thank the officials. Now this one may be more difficult for a lot of people because emotions do run rampant especially during a close game when the stakes are high. Again use the zip-it approach. Good call or bad, the official has the last word no matter how unfair it may seem. There's nothing more embarrassing to your children, than for you to be told to leave a sporting event by the official.

• Focus on the positive, and compliment players, coaches, and officials. Every player makes mistakes during a game. If your child happens to be the one who made the last mistake and the game was lost, you know how demoralizing this can be to him or her. It is very important that you as a parent take time to focus on the good plays they had during the game.

No game is ever lost on the play of the last batter. Remember all of the batters before him or her could have hit a home run too.

• Be positive and congratulate the winning team. Do not forget to congratulate the losing team on their efforts as well. Remember that you as parent are the role model for your children. They will emulate your sportsmanship behavior (good and bad) with others. For their sake, set a good example.

• For their sake, set a good example. For more information about making youth sports a positive experience, contact the Penn State Cooperative Extension at (814) 623-4800 and request the free youth sports pamphlets for coaches and parents.

Enter Dairy Recipe Drawing

June Dairy Month is "moov-ing" into the calendar of events. That means it's time to send in your favorite recipe using dairy products for Lancaster Farming's annual dairy recipe drawing.

June Dairy Month salutes dairy farmers everywhere for their hard work in providing milk, which we so often take for granted. Lancaster Farming's annual drawing reminds us of all the wonderful dairy products available to produce culinary delights.

To enter the drawing, select your favorite recipe, which must include a substantial amount of at least one dairy product. These ingredients count as a dairy product: milk, cream, sour cream, whipped cream, butter, yogurt, buttermilk, dry milk, ice cream, and all hard and soft cheeses.

Please check your ingredients carefully. Margarine and non-dairy substitutes such as frozen whipped topping do not qualify as dairy products.

Dairy recipes are needed for appetizers, soups, breads, entrees, vegetables, desserts, beverages, snacks, and salads.

Clearly print or type your recipe entry. Be sure to give accurate measurements, temperatures, times, and sizes of baking dishes to use. We reserve the right to disqualify entries if these guidelines are not followed.

With your entry, include a few paragraphs about yourself and your family. Although it is not required, a photograph of you and of your family is preferred. We and our readers love to "see" the people who send in the recipes.

Win one of these "cow prizes" offered to readers who participate in Lancaster Farming's June Dairy Month Drawing. Lou Ann Good, food and family features editor, displays some of the prizes totaling $500.

Photographs will be returned if you write your name and address on the back of the picture.

Only one entry per family allowed. This contest is for adults who are at least 18 years old. We require this because children who send in recipes often inadvertently miss measurements, ingredients or a part of the instructions.

Send your recipe, photo, and accompanying information with your complete address. If we do not have your complete mailing address, we cannot send your prize if you win.

Send entries immediately. Entries must be postmarked by June 1 to be eligible for the drawing. The state dairy princess and alternates will select the winners. Recipe entries will be printed throughout the month of June. A list of the winners will be printed in the June 30 issue.

Send entries to Lou Ann Good, Lancaster Farming Dairy Drawing, P.O. Box 609, 1 E. Main St., Ephrata, PA 17522.

Adams County Extension Agent

Last evening our youngest son, 5, opened the front door and called out for Dad. Russell and I were I the kitchen talking, regrouping after a busy work day. Again he yelled so I answered. No response from him. Again he yelled for Dad and with more determination I yelled back, "What do you want?"

No response.

Suddenly he appeared in the kitchen looked right past me to Russell and asked him, "Are you ready?"

Apparently some deal to play outside had been struck between the two of them, and I was not included.

During the past year with our five- and six-year old sons, I've come to realize my role in the family. I'm the mom and will never be the dad.

It's a wonderful experience to see the children so infatuated with their father. I know I sure was infatuated with that same guy 25 years ago when we met in high school!

As a mom, I have recognized the importance of Russell's role and allow it to flourish, keeping my nose out when necessary and allowing him to be just what he is in all his glory, a loving father.

If you're the father of a young child, you know the importance and joys of physical contact with your child. Russell enjoys all the open signs of affection the boys bestow upon him. As he can already see; the amounts of hugs, kisses and curling up a his lap will change as the children continue to grow and develop into fine young men.

Gee, that makes me stop and think. When they are fine young men, that means I'll be a fine older lady with a nice older man by my side.

There will be lots of ground to cover before that point, but for now our children see Daddy as the greatest. What a thrill to help Daddy do whatever he is doing outside.

When we were childless, we used to laugh when we'd see children with their Dads pretending to be doing just what Dad was doing and of course right smack dab beside him.

We thought those kids surely were in the way. But now it's obvious to us the importance of this shadowing, and the amount of learning that is taking place. If your children are grown, think back. I'm sure you can remember your shadows and the things they loved to do with you!

A father's work is important. At our house, you should hear the squabbles when Dad occasionally announces it's so and so's turn to go to work with him for a few hours. He'll admit it's the office candy machine the boys love about his office job, but they also realize that Daddy works to support his family.

Russell will tell you it's hard to explain to the children what he does for a living since they are at the stage where they believe a construction job is the best. It's Uncle Gary, who in their minds, has the ultimate job as a mason contractor. What other job allows you to play in a really big pile of sand, drive a big truck, and back hoe, and be outside all day!

Dad take a minute and pat your self on the back. Your role as a father plays such an important part in the lives of your children. Many times we take this for granted until a father figure is not present on a regular basis in a child's life.

It's all those little things about life that are learned from you a Dad. Let's take time this week to slow our thoughts and busy lives a bit, to step back and take notice of all those wonderful small things in the father-child relationship and its importance to your family.

Mom if you're reading this, remember when the kids call for Dad, it's best to respond, "Just a minute I'll get him for you!"

Basic Chicken Cookery

GEORGETOWN, Del. — There's no end to the ways chicken can be prepared. Although it could be served every day of the year without repeating the same dish twice, there are a few basic cooking methods which should be mastered before any cook begins to experiment with new and creative ideas.

Roast Chicken — Sprinkle body cavity and outside of one whole broiler-fryer chicken with ½ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Hook wing tips under back of chicken. On rack, in a shallow baking pan, place chicken, breast side up. Roast in 375° F. oven about 1 hour or until internal temperature reaches 180° F. Let stand 10 minutes before carving.

Fried Chicken — In a plastic bag, mix together ⅓ cup flour, ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon paprika, and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Add 1 cup-up chicken, a few pieces at a time. Shake to coat. Place chicken on a rack to dry, 15 minutes. In large frypan, place ¼ cup cooking oil and heat to medium-high temperature. Add chicken, skin side down, and cook, uncovered, about 10 minutes, turning to brown on all sides. Reduce heat to medium-low; cover, and cook about 20 to 25 minutes or until chicken is fork tender. Drain on paper towels.

Oven Fried Chicken — In small frypan, place ¼ cup margarine and melt over medium heat. In shallow dish, place ½ cup dry breadcrumbs; stir in ½ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Using 1 cut-up chicken, dip chicken, one piece at a time, in margarine, turning to coat. Place chicken in breadcrumb mixture, turning to coat. On lightly greased baking sheet, place chicken in single layer. Bake in 375° F. oven about 50 minutes or until chicken is brown and fork tender.

Broiled Chicken — Using 2 broiler-fryer chicken halves, 4 quarters or an equivalent of parts, place chicken on broiler pan. Lightly brush chicken with cooking oil; sprinkle with ½ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Turn chicken skin side down. Set oven temperature at broil or 450° F. Arrange broiler pan about 8-inches from heat source. Broil 20 to 25 minutes. Turn chicken; broil about 15 minutes longer or until fork tender.

Grilled Chicken — On prepared grill with rack about 8-inches from heat source, place chicken halves, quarters, or parts. Grill, turning frequently, about 1 to 1¼ hours or until fork tender. Bottled or homemade barbecue sauce may be brushed on the chicken during the last 15 to 20 minutes of grilling time.

Simmered Chicken — (For recipes calling for "cooked chicken") — In a deep saucepan, place 1 chicken, whole or cut-up. Add 2 cups water; 1 small onion, sliced; 3 celery tops; ½ teaspoon salt; and ¼ teaspoon pepper. Cover and simmer about 45 minutes or until chicken is fork tender. Remove chicken from pan and cool; reserve broth for later use, if desired.

Separate meat from bones; discard bones and skin. Cut chicken into bite-size pieces. A 3½ pound chicken will yield about 3 cups diced, cooked chicken and 2 to 2½ cups broth.

Microwave Chicken — In shallow microwave dish, arrange 1 cut-up chicken (skin removed) in single layer with meatier parts toward outside of dish. Brush chicken with 1 tablespoon melted butter or margarine. Cover with wax paper and microwave at high 18 to 20 minutes (or about 6 minutes per pound), rotating dish one-half turn after 9 minutes. Sprinkle with ½ teaspoon seasoned salt and let stand, covered, 5 to 10 minutes.

Onions For Your Health

Onions are one of the most common cooking ingredients throughout the world. Texture, color, and zest add intrigue to all types of dishes — from appetizers to condiments to main entrees.

Onions not only provide flavor but also health-promoting phytochemicals as well as nutrients.

Onions may help guard against chronic diseases such as cataracts, cardiovascular, and cancer.

With only 30 calories per serving, onions are sodium, fat, and cholesterol free, and provide dietary fiber, vitamin C, vitamin B6, potassium, and other nutrients.

Enjoy these recipes that are not only good to eat but good for you.

CARAMELIZED ONIONS

3 pounds yellow onions (6-9)
Cooking spray, as needed
1½ tablespoons olive oil
1 teaspoon dried thyme, crushed
1 teaspoon dried rosemary, crushed
Salt and pepper, to taste

Halve and slice onions. Coat 12-inch skillet with cooking spray. Over medium heat, saute onions in oil for 15-20 minutes, stirring occasionally, or until soft and light golden. Stir in thyme, rosemary, salt, and pepper. Serve warm or cover and refrigerate for up to 5 days. Makes 12 servings.

Serving ideas:

• Wilted Spinach Salad — Toss crisp fresh spinach leaves with hot caramelized onions, sundried tomatoes, and pine nuts. Drizzle with warmed vinaigrette dressing and toss well.

• Enchilada Stack With An Attitude — Layer a corn tortilla with black or pinto beans, diced bell pepper, dabs of salsa, grated sharp cheddar cheese, and a layer of caramelized onions. Repeat layering then top with a third tortilla. Sprinkle with cheese and bake until hot and melted.

• Smothered Sea Bass — Poach sea bass or other firm white fish and serve on a bed of caramelized onions with a scattering of steamed baby carrots and fresh dill sprigs over all.

HEARTY ONION-VEGGIE SANDWICH

6 ounces fat-free cream cheese
18 slices multi-grain bread
12 ounces red onion, thinly sliced
1 cup sliced cucumbers, marinated in French dressing
12 crisp lettuce leaves
12 tomato slices
6-ounces thinly sliced cheddar cheese
1½ cups alfalfa sprouts (optional)

Spread cream cheese evenly over six slices bread. Top with half of the onion slices and all the cucumbers. Stack with lettuce leaves, sliced tomato, and a second slice of bread. Lay cheddar over second bread slice, add sprouts, and remaining onions. Top with third slice of bread. Cut sandwich in half and secure with picks. Makes six servings.

CLASSIC ONION SOUP

8 cups sliced yellow onions
6 tablespoons butter
4 teaspoons sugar
2 quarts reduced-sodium chicken broth
Salt and pepper to taste
½ baguette French bread, sliced, toasted
Grated Romano cheese

Using large saucepan that holds at least 4 quarts, cook onions over medium heat, stirring often, in melted butter for 12 minutes or until tender and golden brown. Add sugar and cook, stirring, for one minute. Add broth, cover and bring to a boil. Simmer 12 minutes. Season with salt and pepper. To serve, float toast on bowl of soup and sprinkle with cheese. Makes 6 servings.

CREAMY ONION DIP

2 cups finely chopped onions
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 teaspoon paprika
1 cup sour cream
Salt and pepper, to taste

Saute onions in oil over medium heat about 3 minutes or until barely tender. Stir in paprika. Add onions to sour cream in a bowl. Add salt and pepper, to taste. Cover and chill. Makes 1⅔ cups. To serve in onion bowl, cut off top third of large red onion. Trim small edge off root end to make flat support. Peel onion. Leaving outer two layers intact, scoop out onion center making a hollow to hold the dip.

HERB BAKED ONION BLOOM

1 large onion
1 tablespoon butter
1 teaspoon dried thyme or oregano
½ teaspoon dried rosemary
Salt and pepper, to taste
Parsley or paprike, if desired

Cut about ½-inch off top of onion; peel onion. Cut onion into 12-16 vertical wedges, leaving root base intact. Set bloomed onion on 14x10-inch foil piece. Top onion with butter, thyme or oregano, rosemary, and salt and pepper, to taste.

Wrap foil around seasoned bloom and pinch edges together tightly. Place wrapped onion upright on pan and bake at 425 degrees for 30 minutes or until onion is tender and cooked but "petals" still have body and stand upright. If desired, sprinkle with minced parsley or paprika. Baked wrapped onion may be held in warm location for up to one hour before serving. Makes one serving.

Caramelized Mustard Bloom: Combine 1½ tablespoons prepared mustard with 1½ tablespoons brown sugar, blending until smooth. Spoon over onion bloom. Sprinkle with ¼ teaspoon pepper.

FRENCH ONION SOUP

2 pounds onions
5 cans beef broth consomme
1 can water
2-3 tablespoons flour
½ cup butter
½ pound Swiss cheese slices
Croutons or toast

Slice onions into rings. Melt butter and saute onions until transparent. Mix flour to coat onions. Add broth and water and bring to a boil. Simmer one hour. When ready to serve, place soup in crocks. Cover tops with croutons or toast and then cheese. Place beneath broiler until cheese melts.

Onions are low in calories yet add abundant flavor to a wide variety of foods. With only 30 calories per serving, onions are sodium, fat, and cholesterol free, and provide dietary fiber, vitamin C, vitamin B6, potassium, and other key nutrients.

Higher intakes of fruits and vegetables have been associated with a variety of health benefits. Research shows that onions may help guard against many chronic diseases. That's probably because onions contain generous amounts of a flavonoid called quercetin. Other sources are tea and apples, but research shows that absorption of quercetin from onions is twice that from tea and more than three times that from apples. Studies have shown that quercetin protects against cataracts, cardiovascular disease, and cancer.

In addition, onions contain a variety of other naturally occurring chemicals known as organosulfur compounds that have been linked to lowering blood pressure and cholesterol levels.

For recipes using onions, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the National Onion Association, Department A, 822 7th Street, Suite 510, Greeley, CO 80631.

BEST EVER ONION RINGS

3 large onions (about 9 to 11 ounces each), peeled and trimmed
1 cup flour
1 teaspoon paprika
¾ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1 cup non-alcoholic beer
Vegetable oil

Cut onions crosswise into ½-inch slices; pull apart into rings. (Refrigerate broken or end pieces for other uses.) Mix flour, paprika, salt and pepper in large bowl. Add beer, stirring with wire whip until foam is gone.

Baked version: Toss onion rings with batter and transfer to plate, letting excess drip off as you transfer. Heat 1 tablespoon oil in large nonstick skillet (11- or 12-inch) over medium-high heat. Place about half the onion rings in single layer in heated skillet and cook until browned, turning once, about 1½ minutes on each side. Repeat with remaining onions. Transfer to ungreased shallow baking pans or cookie sheets, arranging in single layer. Bake at 425 degrees for 6 minutes or until crisp. Makes 6 servings.

Deep-fried version: Heat at least 2-inches oil in deep-fryer for 5 to 10 minutes or according to fryer directions. Farmers Market Installs Licensed Kitchen To Provide Value-Added Produce

MARIETTA, Ohio — On April 7, the River City Farmers Market began its third consecutive season, and offerings will soon expand when a new commercial kitchen opens for use.

'Our motto is 'Handmade, homemade or homegrown!' and people started bringing handmade crafts and other items to sell besides the regular farm market products," said Eric Barrett, agriculture agent for Ohio State University Extension in Washington County. Barrett's father, Jim, was the previous county agriculture agent and got the farmer's market back in business in 1999 after a long absence. A strong marketing campaign in 2000 boosted the number of vendors at the Saturday morning markets, and the type of offerings increased.

"People wanted to bring baked items and home-canned goods, too, but you can't sell those unless they are made in a fully-licensed kitchen," Barrett said. "Some people did get a home license for baked goods, but there is no such thing for canned goods. To sell 'home-canned' products, you have to use a commercial kitchen."

Such a kitchen is available in neighboring Athens County, but interest grew quickly in starting one in Washington County. The Washington County Fair Board wanted to improve the facilities in the Junior Fair Building anyway, and a $25,000 grant from the Sisters of St. Joseph Charitable Fund got the project under way, Barrett said.

Though a few details remain to be completed before full licensing from the Ohio Department of Agriculture and the city health department, an open house of the non-profit Marietta Kitchen Creations was scheduled on Thursday, April 26.

Jellies and jams, fresh bagged salad greens, salsa and canned vegetables are just some of the items that will be produced in the shared-use kitchen facility, Barrett said.

"Farmers who sell their items at the farm market can use this kitchen to produce value-added items, increasing their profit," he said. "But even more people are interested. If a city resident wants to produce tomato juice, or salsa, or anything, we can link them up with area farmers who can supply the produce they need. The county sees this kitchen as sort of a business incubator project, helping new companies get the start they need."

The group is also working with Marietta College's Small Business Development Center to help producers write business plans, come up with logos for their farm or business, and offer other new venture-related assistance.

Anyone can become a member of the kitchen as long as they go through some basic safety and sanitation training and pay a small membership fee, Barrett said. Members will be charged a nominal fee for use of the facility: $6 an hour for uses that don't require any heat, such as bagged salad greens or jars of cookie mixes, and for use of digital labelers for nutrition information labels; $8 an hour for using the commercial ovens, such as what's needed for baked goods; and $10 an hour for "full use" of the kitchen, such as using the commercial jar fillers, steam kettles and other canning equipment. Part of the proceeds go to the Fair Board for the building's upkeep; the rest will be set aside for future equipment upgrades.

In addition to the Sisters of St. Joseph Charitable Fund, other supporters include the Ohio Department of Agriculture, OSU Extension, the Marietta Business Development Center, Community 20/20, Marietta Community Foundation, and the Community Development Corporation.

The kitchen is located in the Junior Fair Building on the Washington County Fairgrounds, 922 Front St.

For more information about the kitchen, contact Eric Barrett at (740) 376-7431 or barrett.90@osu.edu.

Learn About Good, Bad Fungi

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Ever wonder why bananas turn brown after they've been sitting on the kitchen counter for a few days?

The common occurrence is caused by a pathogen known as anthracnose fungus, says Steve Nameth, an Ohio State University plant pathologist. "The pathogen is already present on the peel and becomes active under warm conditions," he said.

The fungus is not harmful to humans, but the sight of brown spots on bananas makes them unappetizing nonetheless. The anthracnose fungus will be just one of several common plant diseases highlighted during BioHio 2001. Visitors to the "Plant Diseases and You" display will have the opportunity to taste, touch and smell a variety of common fungi. Nameth said the purpose of the program is to show how common plant diseases are in our lives, but erase the "unappealing" perception people have for them. "Just because it's a fungus doesn't mean it's disgusting or icky," said Nameth.

BioHio will be held on the Columbus campus of the College of Food, Agricultural and Environmental Sciences from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. May 10-12. The three-day event will feature hands-on demonstrations, exhibits and tours covering agriculture, the environment, gardening, managing wildlife, fish farming, native plants, plant diseases and more.

Nameth said many plant diseases have a history, some of which have changed our culture or led to medical breakthroughs. For example, the potato late blight, which caused the Irish potato famine, brought Irish families to the United States, and ergot, a poisonous fungus found in rye, has been used as a drug to induce labor and aid in fighting Parkinson's disease.

Some fungi, such as mushrooms and smut, are edible. Smut is a fungus that affects grasses, wheat and corn.

For more information about BioHio 2001, call (614) 292-3897 or visit the BioHio 2001 Web site at http://www.oardc.ohio-state.edu/biohio/.

ANSWER — Dotty Gaul, Douglassville, wrote that when she was growing up in the Harrisburg area during the 1950s, her family went to the Blue Parasol, a drive-in restaurant with curb service. They served pork barbecue sandwiches with no tomato sauce but with relish. She wanted the recipe. Thanks to Mrs. Calleman, Hummelstown, for sending the recipe.

Pork Bar-B-Que

Boneless pork roast, rolled, tied
Salt and pepper
4 tablespoons brown sugar

Rub pork roast with salt and pepper. Sprinkle with brown sugar and rub in. Bake at 350 degrees until done.

Refrigerate overnight until firm. Remove netting and slice thin on a slicer. Place in a steam table and add very little water. Take a fork and shred meat. Keep turning over with a fork until shredded. Add water only when necessary.

Place on roll that is toasted on the bottom. Serve with India relish and salt.

The same recipe can be used with ham.

ANSWER — A reader wanted the recipe to make chicken barbecue sauce that tastes like that served at open-pit barbecues. Thanks to Mrs. Calleman, Hummelstown for sending a recipe.

Open Pit Chicken Bar-B-Que

Split fryers
1 cup water
1 cup vinegar
½ cup butter
Salt and pepper

Heat water, vinegar, and butter until melted. Add salt and pepper. Spray on chicken. Grill. Keep turning and spraying chicken constantly.

ANSWER — Carol Spangler wanted a recipe for hot pepper jam using green and jalapeno peppers. Thanks to Fran Westfall, New Oxford, for sending a recipe.

Jalapeno Jelly

3 jalapeno peppers
4 bell peppers
1 cup white vinegar
5 cups sugar
1 bottle liquid pectin

Cut peppers in half. Remove seeds and stems. Run peppers through food grinder, using fine blade. Use all juice. Slowly boil the first four ingredients slowly for 10 minutes. Remove from heat. Add liquid pectin and boil hard for one minute. Pour into sterilized half pint jars to within ½-inch of top. Put on cap, screw band firmly. Process in boiling water bath 5 minutes to seal. Yield: 5 half pint jars.

ANSWER — For Evelyn Reinfeld who wanted to know about using raw sugar in recipes, Linda Fisher, New Providence, sends this advice: She uses only raw sugar, no granulated or brown sugar. In baking, mix the raw sugar with eggs and canola oil. For best results, allow the raw sugar crystals to dissolve before adding the dry ingredients by whipping with a wire whisk. Let set 5-10 minutes. If the sugar crystals aren't dissolved before, they will melt while baking and keep the cake or cookies from rising properly or getting fluffy. You can use less sugar because raw sugar is sweeter.

ANSWER — Jennifer Kauffman wanted a recipe for maple and brown sugar oatmeal. Thanks to Linda Fisher, New Providence, for sending her recipe.

Maple And Brown Sugar Oatmeal

2 cups oatmeal
1½ teaspoon salt
¾ cup raw sugar OR ¼-½ cup maple syrup

Place ingredients in 2-quart saucepan and cover with water and let stand 10 minutes. Turn on heat and stir occasionally until it cooks. Turn off heat and put cover on 5 minutes to steam it. If mixture is too stiff, add water until it reaches the consistency desired.

Serve with raisins or cold milk.

ANSWER — For the reader who e-mailed a question about the sour cream cake, here is one from Joan Byerly, Warwick, Md.

Coconut Sour Cream Cake

1 white cake mix
8½-ounces cream of coconut
¼ cup oil
8-ounces sour cream
3 eggs

With electric mixer, combine all ingredients in a large bowl. Pour into greased and floured 9x13x2-inch pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 25-30 minutes. Cool.

Frosting:

2 cups powdered sugar
1 tablespoon milk
8-ounces cream cheese, softened
8-ounces heavy cream

Mix sugar, milk, and softened cream cheese well with an electric mixer. Whip heavy cream until stiff peaks form. Fold whipped cream into other ingredients. Spread over cooled cake. Store in refrigerator.

Here is another version of coconut cake, which Lee Laverty, Dover, N.J., writes is very moist and rich, but easy to make.

Coconut Cake

1 box for butter cake mix
16-ounces sour cream
2 cups sugar
12-ounces coconut
Frozen whipped topping

Prepare box cake as directed and bake in two round or square cake pans. When cooled, slice each layer in half so that you have four layers.

Combine sour cream, sugar, and coconut. Reserve one cup of mixture. Spread this filling between each layer. Mix reserved cup of coconut mixture with ¾ cup whipped topping. Use this to cover top and sides of cake.

Seal cake with food wrap and refrigerate for 2-3 days then serve.

ANSWER — Here is the correct recipe for homemade ice cream sandwiches from Mary Ann Reich.

Homemade Ice Cream Sandwiches

½ cup margarine
1 cup brown sugar
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
½ cup cocoa powder
2 cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
½ gallon vanilla ice cream

In medium-size bowl, cream margarine and brown sugar (using margarine and brown sugar rather then butter and granulated sugar produces a chewy, soft cookie).

Beat in eggs, one at a time, then vanilla extract.

In a separate bowl, stir the cocoa, flour, baking powder, and salt. Gradually add to the margarine mixture. Beat until well combined. Gather the dough into a ball and chill at least one hour.

Heat oven to 375 degrees. On a lightly floured surface, roll out the dough to ¼-inch thick. Use a ruler and sharp knife to cut out 2¼x5-inch rectangular pieces.

Transfer the cookie rectangles with a spatula to an ungreased baking pan. Use the tines of a fork to make patterns on the cookies. Bake the cookies for 8-10 minutes or until set. Cool on cooling rack.

Meanwhile, cut rectangular blocks from the ice cream. To do this, peel back the half gallon carton from the ice cream, and cut ½-inch thick slabs that are roughly the dimensions of your baked cookies. Return the blocks to the freezer. When the cookies have thoroughly cooled, place one ice cream block between two cookies. Trim the sides with a knife, wrap the sandwich in foil, and freeze several hours. Repeat until you have used all the cookies and ice cream.

ANSWER — For the person who wanted recipes for fruit soup without alcohol, here is one from Patty Beran.

½ cup sugar
4 cups water
¼ cup quick-cooking tapioca
½ cup raisins
2 cups mixed dried fruit
½ lemon finely chopped, including peel
1 stick cinnamon

In large saucepan, combine sugar and water. Bring to a boil. Gradually add tapioca, stirring constantly. Add remaining ingredients; cover and simmer 1½ hours, stirring occasionally. Discard cinnamon stick. Serve hot. Makes 10 ½ cup servings.

ANSWER — Can you believe it — another version for creamsicle dessert, which proves there is always a different way to make the same dish. This one is from Pat Partash, Bigler.

Orange Creamsickle Cake

1 orange supreme cake mix
3-ounce package Jell-O
1 cup hot water
1 cup cold water

Prepare cake mix as directed. Bake in 13x9-inch pan. Cool 15 minutes. Mix Jell-O, hot water, and cold water. Make holes in cake with fork; pour Jell-O over cake. Let cool and frost with pudding icing.

Pudding Icing:

1 small box vanilla pudding
2 (1.3 ounce) packets Dream Whip
1 cup cold milk

Combine ingredients and mix until thick. Spread over cake.

BEEF. IT'S WHAT'S FOR DINNER.

Rembolds Prepare For MCC Tristate Relief Sale

GAY BROWNLEE
Somerset Co. Correspondent

SALISBURY (Somerset Co.) — Edgar Rembold says the red elm spiral lamp he will donate on July 20 and 21 to the Mennonite Central Committees TriState Relief Sale at the Garrett County Fairgrounds at McHenry, Md., was made with 90 percent handwork. This was accomplished using wood rasps.

Mennonite Central Committee is the relief and development arm of the North American Mennonite and Brethren in Christ churches. It is headquartered in Akron. About 45 relief sales conducted annually in North American locations, channel 88 cents from every dollar to MCC. The funds are used for food, health, education, job creation, agriculture, disabilities and peace-related activities.

Rembold's wife, Alice, enjoys crocheting and keeping a portfolio of her husband's wood crafts since he retired 13 years ago from the Harbison-Walker Refractories near Grantsville, Md. Her contribution to the TriState Relief Sale will be a delicate crocheted baby afghan that she made.

"I had given up crocheting for awhile. I lost interest, but then I picked it up again over the winter," she said. "I like to work with baby yarn, its soft," she added.

By giving 40 years of service to one employer, Rembold holds a job record few people in today's mobile generation will ever achieve.

'I don't miss the work," he said, "but I miss the fellows I worked with." So instead of making fire brick these days, at his leisure in the Savage Road shop, he accepts custom orders like the challenging armoire he is working on at present.

"Anything you want, just give me a bit of a picture of it," he said with confidence.

Holding up a hand that is missing something at the fingertips, Rembold grins. "On the 21st of January I got too close to the saw. I knew it was more than a band aid would cover." Alice drove him to the local hospital emergency room for treatment, but in a matter of days he was right back to work.

Edgar Rembold exhibits two spiral lamps similar to the one he is donating to the MCC TriState Relief Sale at Garrett County Fairgrounds in Maryland on July 20, 21.

Alice Rembold of Salisbury will donate this baby afghan to the MCC TriState Relief Sale. For effect in displaying it she brought out a few dolls from her own childhood.

At the outset of taking an order the one thing Rembold makes clear to customers is he won't be coerced into setting deadlines. Deadlines and retirement to his way of thinking are incompatible soul mates. He works for enjoyment and keeps out the stress.

Ironically, the plant where he once worked for still relies on Rembold to build the charger boards that are necessary to move the clay in and out of the press. Occasionally, these must be replaced.

The spiral lamp pattern originated in Germany, he said. Beyond a natural bent for woodcrafts, the necessary skills to perfect a spiral piece were refined under an accomplished instructor. That was Alices late father, a carpenter by trade and the builder of the heavy spiral floor lamp they having standing in their livingroom.

Rembold also builds spiral floor candle holders that have a 3-inch cup.

The couple reported they absorbed a lot about the MCC relief sales when they decided to attend two that were held elsewhere. These were in Kidron, Ohio and in Harrisburg.

"I helped to get the TriState Sale off the ground," the woodcrafter said with a twinkle in his eye, "but, I said I wouldn't carry an office."

He will act as a runner, however, when things are hopping on sale Saturday, just to help the auctioneers.

Rembold devotes much of his time to the very active Springs Historical Society which operates the Springs Farmers Market. This entity gets underway on Memorial Day weekend Saturday at 8 a.m., and is open every Saturday through September.

Additionally, the first Friday and Saturday of every October, the Springs Historical Society holds the Springs Folk Festival to preserve the early arts and crafts of the Casselman Valley settlers.

The 2001 TriState Relief Sale amid the panoramic mountains and lakes of western Pennsylvania, western Maryland, and West Virginia is being held in the area for the third time.

On the wood lathe is an unfinished spiral lamp Edgar Rembold of Salisbury is making with a wooden rasp. Ninety percent of the tedious work is done by hand.

The two-day extravaganza will feature all new items in a Friday evening silent auction, Saturday main auction, children's auction, and the market place.

A puppet show is planned for Friday evening and dinner will be available.

There will be numerous quilts, wall hangings, art work, handcrafted furniture and chests, rugs, first quality glass by Simon Pearce; P. Buckley Moss prints and pottery, vacation and weekend packages for The Wisp, the Inn at Georgian Place, and Laurelville Mennonite Church Center.

Food attractions are Saturday pancake and sausage breakfast, followed by chicken barbecue at lunch, homemade ice cream, half-moon pies, apple dumplings and various specialties. The youngsters will tally coins for MCC from combined Penny Power projects that were held in churches, pack school kits and health kits, and participate in activities similar to those done by children in countries MCC serves.

At the Springs Mennonite Church, (Somerset County) MCC's Brenda Wagner recently expressed an opinion that the TriState Relief Sale's advantage is that of being held in a location thriving with tourism.

Her message told how Wagner's MCC experience with a woman in a country of another culture, brought new meaning to the biblical account of the woman who touched the hem of Jesus' garment and what his response to her was.

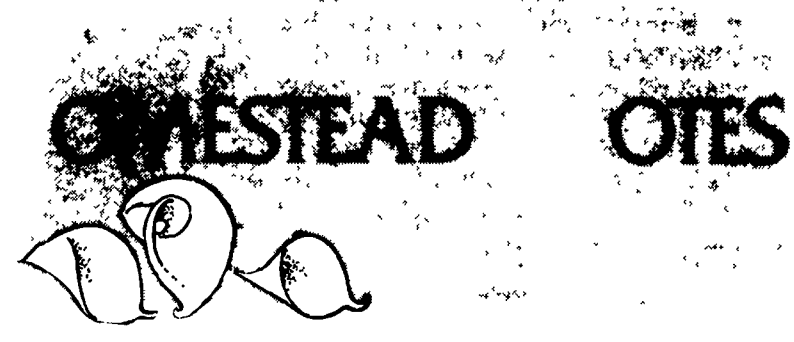
Garrett County Fairgrounds are very near the rippling waters of Deep Creek Lake, a popular four-season resort area that attracts city dwellers from Pittsburgh, Washington, D.C. and Baltimore. The site is on Route 219 South in McHenry, Maryland, 13 miles south of Interstate 68 Exit 14A, 28 miles west of Cumberland, Maryland. Admission and parking to the sale are free.

Campsites on the grounds are also available. For information including a listing of accommodations call (814) 445-6945. Or write to TriState Relief Sale, P.O. Box 824, Grantsville, Md. 21536, or E-mail: soridge@wpia.net.



Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

For more than 25 years, I've spent my Monday mornings phoning auctioneers for prices for "Sales Reports" in Lancaster Farming newspaper. I've enjoyed the work, but have decided to let someone else do the job. I'm sure that I will find plenty to do to keep me busy. For one thing, there are 10 different kinds of flower bulbs in the basement waiting to be planted. And, there are still some 90 flower plants in the house to be watered regularly.

When the grandchildren come in the evening, we play games and I'm amazed at their enthusiasm and speed. It tells me how much I have slowed down. They run and jump as we play games and I'm afraid they will slip on rugs on the hardwood floors. It is surprising to see how many places we can find to hide. One even sat behind closed doors on top of the washing machine.

Our Easter was spent in New Jersey with our oldest daughter and her family. Our oldest son, Kenneth, came with his family from Delaware. Their daughter goes to college in Richmond, Va. where they lived last year. We all relaxed and talked on their large screened-in porch overlooking the swimming pool. Our son-in-law left at 5:30 the next morning on a business trip to London.

The other day I was really upset as my husband sawed down a big, old crab apple tree. As the top was dead, I feared it might someday fall on the house. But, instead of taking off the dead part, he cut down the whole tree. And, where did it fall — on top of my beautiful new iris bed.

This isn't the first time that he surprised me. Last fall, as I peeled pears for canning, I mentioned that they were difficult to peel and wished they were Bartlett instead of Bosch. So, he got one of his three chain saws and cut down the young tree that was full of pears.

New Ways With Chicken But Same Commitment To Nutritious Tastes

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

CENTERVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — As a food, chicken has steadily grown in popularity and is a healthy food choice, but when it comes to chicken farming, the industry has taken a beating.

Farm odors, particularly chicken odors, are offensive to many people. A small sector of the population perpetrates outcries against poultry smells by trying to impose strict government regulations against the industry and limit expansion.

Although these people are well-intentioned, they are not justified.

The poultry industry wants the nonfarming community to understand the perspective of growers and their commitment to protecting the environment while producing a safe, excellent product.

The Lancaster County Poultry Association provides an annual dinner to county family living and consumer science teachers to update them on the newest scientific, nutritional research, and food preparation methods.

Recently Connie Parvis, Delmarva Poultry, explained poultry's role in the food industry. Farming practices are better today than ever before, Parvis said. Because farmers only represent two percent of the population, they have become the scapegoat for environmental problems with water and air. In many cases, farmers are unfairly blamed and no evidence exists that farming methods are the culprit, she said.

Parvis showed a video of a Delmarva farm family, who, through hard work and with respect to the land, maintain a family broiler operation.

Parvis also discussed how consumer demands influence the industry. Statistics show that in 1975, the average consumer ate 38 pounds of chicken annually, which increased to 80 pounds per capita in 2000.

The increase was attributed to the nutrition, versatility, convenience, and economical benefits of poultry.

Consumers want food tailored to their lifestyles. This is evident by the following statistics: In 1962, the average consumer purchased 83 whole chickens, 15 cutup, and 2 further processed. In 2000, these statistics changed to 9 whole chickens, 46 cut up, and 45 further processed.

Food poultry prices remain economical despite most other items increasing dramatically. After the inflation adjustment, the actual price of chicken is less today than 40 years ago.

"The poultry industry is committed to supplying the safest food product in the world," Parvis said.

Numerous recipes were distributed to the teachers to share with their students. Here are some of the recipes:

Connie Parvis, Delmarva Poultry, and Nelson Groff, president of Lancaster County Poultry, review statistics that show dramatic increases in poultry consumption in the past 25 years.

CHICKEN OLE

1 teaspoon chili powder, divided
¼ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1 cup bottled picante sauce
⅓ cup orange marmalade
1 tablespoon minced cilantro or parsley

With meat mallet or similar flattening utensil, pound chicken breasts to ¼-inch thickness. In a small dish, mix together ½ teaspoon of the chili powder and salt. Sprinkle mixture over chicken. In frypan, place oil and heat to medium-high temperature. Add chicken and cook, turning, about 5 minutes or until browned. Add picante sauce, marmalade, and remaining chili powder, stirring to mix. Spoon sauce over chicken. Sprinkle cilantro or parsley over all. Cook 5 minutes longer or until chicken is fork tender. Makes 4 servings.

LEMON-DILL CHICKEN SAUTE

⅓ cup dry breadcrumbs
1 teaspoon lemon-pepper
¼ teaspoon dried dillweed
3 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons olive oil

In a shallow dish, mix together breadcrumbs, lemon-pepper, and dillweed. In second dish, place lemon juice. Add chicken, one piece at a time, to lemon juice, then to crumb mixture, turning to coat on all sides. In large nonstick frypan, place oil and heat to medium-high temperature. Add chicken and cook, turning, about 10 minutes or until chicken is brown and fork tender. Makes 4 servings.

SWEET AND SOUR CHICKEN STIR-FRY

4 broiler-fryer chicken breast halves, boned, skinned, cut in 1-inch pieces
3 tablespoons brown sugar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
½ teaspoon ground ginger
¼ cup reduced-sodium soy sauce
3 tablespoons vinegar
1 can (8 ounces) pineapple chunks in juice
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1 large clove garlic, minced
1 cup green and red pepper strips
Rice

In bowl, place brown sugar, cornstarch, and ginger; stir to mix. Stir in soy sauce and vinegar. Add pineapple chunks with juice; set aside. In frypan, place oil and heat to medium-high temperature. Add chicken and garlic and cook, stirring, about 5 minutes or until chicken is well-browned. Add peppers and stir-fry 1 to 2 minutes or until crisp-tender. Stir reserved pineapple mixture and add to pan. Cook, stirring, until mixture boils and thickens. Serve chicken over steamed white or brown rice. Makes 4 servings.

CHICKEN JOES

1 pound ground chicken
Vegetable cooking spray
1½ cups water
1 can (6 ounces) tomato paste
1 package (1.31 ounce) Sloppy Joe seasoning mix
¼ teaspoon chili powder
6 sandwich rolls, split

Spray large non-stick frypan with vegetable cooking spray and heat to medium-high temperature. Add ground chicken and cook, stirring, about 5 minutes or until meat is browned. Drain excess fat. Add water, tomato paste, seasoning mix, and chili powder; stir to mix. Heat mixture to boiling; reduce heat to low and cook 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Spoon ½ cup chicken mixture over bottom half of each roll; top with remaining half roll. Makes 6 servings.

Fat Watcher's Tips

Chicken has long been recognized as a nutritious, low-fat food, but fat content can be further reduced by following these simple tips.

- Trim chicken of visible fatty deposits before cooking.
- Remove chicken skin before eating. The latest research shows little difference in fat content if chicken is cooked with or without skin as long as the skin isn't consumed.
- Broil, bake, steam, stir-fry, or poach chicken instead of frying.
- Roast or broil chicken on a rack so fat can drip off during cooking.
- When roasting or broiling chicken, baste with defatted chicken broth, wine, or citrus juice instead of butter or oil.
- To defat broth, soups, and stews, place in freezer for 30 minutes or refrigerate overnight. Fat will solidify on top of liquid for easy removal.
- Reduce the amount of fat in chicken recipes. Most recipes calling for large amounts of fat are equally good with no more than two tablespoons.
- Use a non-stick skillet when possible. Spray with vegetable cooking spray to prevent sticking.
- Replace oil in marinades with fresh lemon juice, lime juice, wine, or vinegar.
- Look for recipes that use chicken in combination with other low-fat ingredients such as vegetables, fruits, herbs, spices, mustards, and salsa.

Chicken Myths, Misconceptions

Myth: Hormones are used in chicken production.

Fact: No artificial or added hormones are allowed by the U.S. government in the production of chicken in the United States. Steroids are similarly banned. Reports to the contrary are simply untrue.

Myth: Yellow-skinned chicken has more fat than lighter-skinned chicken.

Fact: Differences in skin color are the result of differences in the chicken's diet. Contrary to popular belief, skin color does not affect nutritional value, flavor, tenderness, or fat content.

Fact: White meat is lower in fat and calories, but skinless dark meat is still lower in fat than many cuts of red meat. Dark meat is an equally good source of protein and contains important vitamins and minerals. Dark meat supplies more iron than white meat. Both dark and white meat chicken are healthful food choices.

Fact: Darkening is caused by natural pigment that seeps through the porous bones of chicken during cooking. The pigment contains iron and is safe to eat.

Myth: Chicken breast meat cooked with skin on is higher in fat after the skin is removed than chicken breast meat cooked without skin.

Fact: A thin membrane between the skin and flesh of the chicken holds moisture in the meat while keeping the fat out. So it makes no significant difference in fat content if skin is removed before or after cooking.

Myth: American consumers eat more beef than either chicken or pork.

Fact: On average, U.S. per capita consumption of chicken is about 80 pounds, compared with 69 pounds of beef, and 52 pounds of pork. Chicken is the number one protein choice of American consumers.

Myth: Chicken feet are not edible.

Fact: If properly cleaned and inspected, chicken feet are not only edible, they are considered a delicacy in the Far East.

Convenience Can Save Money

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Did you know that convenience foods save time and effort — that's how they got their name. But some actually can save you money.

Instant mashed potatoes cost less because the water has been taken out and there's less bulk to ship. Others cost less starting with fresh ingredients because they have been canned or frozen so there isn't the spoilage that occurs with fresh foods.

Still others cost you less than starting with basic ingredients because the manufacturer buys in bulk and passes on some of the savings.

The following convenience foods save you money: Instant mashed potatoes; preshredded packaged coconut; canned cranberry sauce; frozen, canned, or powdered orange juice and drinks (fresh squeezed costs about 2½ times more); bottled lemon and lime juice (but not squeeze bottles); boxed lasagna skillet dinner; soy protein patties; canned chicken chow mein; boxed pizza mixes; canned Spanish rice; frozen fish sticks.

These convenience foods cost more than homemade (make them using basic ingredients): Frozen meat pot pies, canned stew, frozen chicken chow mein and chicken a la king, canned pork and beans, frozen batter-dipped deep-fried chicken and shrimp, canned salad sandwich spread, stroganoff skillet dinner, frozen haddock dinner, shrimp newburg and shrimp Creole, yeast roll mixes, frozen and ready-to-serve yeast rolls, frozen ready-to-serve brownies, and cheese spread in a pressure can.

On Mother's Day Pay Tribute To The Women In Your Life

Do you have fond memories of a dish your mother or grandmother prepared? Perhaps your wife's or your mother-in-law's cooking wins rave reviews from your perspective.

Mother's Day is the perfect time to remember the women who play an important role in your life. One of the best ways to show your appreciation is by participating in the "Tribute To Mothers" printed in Lancaster Farming, May 12.

Send in a recipe and a few paragraphs about the person who prepares or who did prepare some of your favorite dishes. We can even print a picture to accompany the recipe if you include a clear photograph.

Be sure to include your name and your relationship to the person you are honoring. Include your full address with any photographs you want returned.

Submissions must be received by May 7. Send to Mother's Day Tribute, Attention: Lou Ann Good, P.O. Box 609, 1 E. Main St., Ephrata, PA 17522.

Springtime Comes To The Farm

Jaylene and Laura tell customers, "$1.25 please," as they take the money for the ice cream cones that their dad dips out. The girls are great salespersons. Mom, Lolly stays home to milk the cows.

"We have hundreds of cats, but my favorite is Velvet and Penny," Jaylene said.

Tonight, Jaylene will crown a new Berks County Lil Miss to replace her.

"I really liked it (being Lil Miss), but now I'll have more time to play," Jaylene said of no longer being responsible for dairy promotion.

"It is important to drink your milk everyday," Jaylene said.

She has two favorite recipes, "using lots of real cheese," that she likes her mother to make. She hopes readers will try the recipes.

Super Easy Macaroni And Cheese

3 tablespoons melted butter
2½ cups uncooked macaroni
½ cup shredded sharp cheddar cheese
1 quart milk

Melt butter in a casserole dish. Add macaroni and stir until coated. Sprinkle with cheese and mix well. Pour milk over all and bake at 325 degrees for one hour.

Cheesy Popcorn

¼ cup grated parmesan cheese
½ teaspoon salt
2 quarts hot popped popcorn

Swinging beneath the canopy of leaves are Jaylene, Laura, and friend April.

Antiques And Collectibles Spill Onto Porches, Gardens

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — Antiques and collectibles are spilling onto porches, yards, and gardens.

Forget expanses of well-manicured yards and pristine bare porches. Today's look is almost reminiscent of Appalachian "hillbilly" property, with sections of rusty iron fences and broken-down rockers interspersed among tangles of wildflowers and natural looking grasses.

But don't be fooled. That casual look doesn't happen naturally.

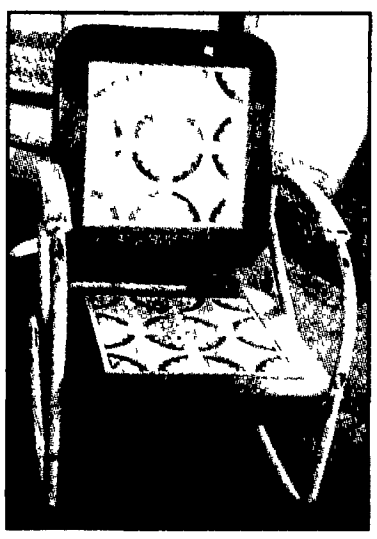
It requires quite a bit of shopping to find old implements, rusty iron fences, and painted garden tools to recreate the appearance of a natural setting. It takes a practiced eye to know where to place a broken-down piece of machinery so that it is eye-appealing rather than an eyesore.

Turn-of-the-century porch swings, gliders, and iron chairs with chipped paint are in demand.

A few years ago, you couldn't give away those clanging metal gliders. But today, people long for days past when they rocked on Grandma's porch to the creaking comfort of the old metal gliders. Now those gliders are in demand, with prices starting about $85.

"It's rare to find iron gliders and chairs in original colors. Most often layer upon layer of different colors reveal the popular colors of past decades," said Julie Krizan.

Krizan sells porch and garden furniture, vintage wicker, and a variety of artifacts guaranteed to create the "look" that baby boomers want to duplicate.



A few years ago, no one wanted these metal chairs with matching gliders, but today people pay top dollar.

In barns and sheds, some people may be fortunate enough to salvage such finds as a hand seeder similar to that held by Julie Good. In the background are several collectibles and a planting shelf that her husband made by combining odds and ends of old pieces.

Although many of yesterday's furnishings are being reproduced, today's versions are not as sturdy, less unique, and often contain plastic parts.

"Porch swings from the turn-of-the-century are more decorative and appealing than today's clunky swings made of pressure-treated lumber," Krizan said with upturned nose. "We don't sell any of those made after the 1960s. Those are horrible."

Krizan's snobbery is typical of today's collector of the porch-crazed era. They want old, original, and unique — well, sometimes they compromise.

According to Julie Good, who with her husband Don, operates Good's Collectables, Ephrata, the rusted wrought iron ornamentals so in demand and so expensive are available from China at a fraction of the cost.

"This is the first year we bought new pieces. And all I can say is, "it sells. It boils down to what you can find and what you can afford," Julie said of customer's purchases.

The new pieces are still iron, they appear old, and are the look that people want. The imported pieces are not as heavy as the old wrought iron typical of this area.

Old garden tools in "great colors" are back in style, not for use, but to lay around to add to the "atmosphere."

Water gardening is the craze. And those old metal water pumps that needed to be primed by hand to get any water are now the perfect accompaniment with water gardens.

Look for old banisters and iron flower pots to place on porch steps, on the wall, and in the garden.

Wooden picket fences continue in popularity but the rusty metal ones seem to be a bit more in demand.

The old hand seeder used in years gone by is now a conversation piece when placed on a porch.

Good's husband often combines a variety of old pieces to make such items as a garden shelf or potting shed to set on a porch.

Items don't need to be valuable. Even dilapidated cometary baskets keep showing up in unexpected places. Filled with vines and flowers, they can be moved randomly to any spot that needs a bit of color.

Park benches with backs that flip so that one can change the direction they are facing are often implemented outdoors.

Wooden boxes with lids make great storage places to hide the new garden tools that are actually used in the flower bed.

Sprinkling cans — the smaller sizes are most popular — and those with unusual shapes or homemade primitive ones sporting weathered paint are in demand. Egg baskets continue to offer the perfect container for

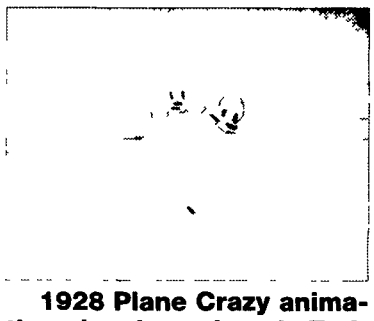
Rare Cartoon Art
An Auction Opportunity

Mickey Mouse to the rescue!

At least that's what Mort Walker, founder of the International Museum of Cartoon Art, Boca Raton, Fla. (1996) is hoping for when rare, original cartoon art will be sold to raise funds for the museum. The first Mickey Mouse drawings will be one of the highlights of the auction to be held by Guernsey's, May 19, at the New-York Historical Society in New York.

"Disney in his wildest dreams couldn't imagine that the original storyboard for Plane Crazy, done in 1928 and featuring Mickey Mouse, could be estimated to sell at auction for $3,200,000 to $3,700,000, Walker told me. The storyboard was given to the museum as a gift years ago by a board member.



1928 Plane Crazy animation drawing, signed. Estimated value $11,000-$15,000. Photo Credit: Guernsey's Auction, New York, N.Y. International Cartoon Museum Boca Raton, Fla.

Walker who draws the Beetle Bailey cartoon strip started the first Cartoon Museum, with his own money, 30 years ago in buildings in New York and Connecticut.

"I began collecting any old cartoons I could get my hands on when nobody was interested," he recalled. "I rescued a whole batch at Hearst Publications as they were being tossed out. Shortly after that I got the idea there should be a cartoon museum."

As Walker pointed out people pay thousands for a comic book, yet the original art cartoons and strips still are affordable. "One problem is that until recently they weren't being commercially sold except for a few galleries like Illustration House in New York. And, there weren't a lot of collectors."

Other things that make the Mickey Mouse storyboard drawings worth so much is that they are considered, quite possibly the "Holy Grail" of cartoon art, certainly among the most significant drawings of the 20th century, according to Walker.

There are 36 sketches on six storyboard panels.

Also offered is a rare Donald Duck cartoon cel from Walt Disney Studios, "The Band Concert" 1935 recognized as being one of the 50 greatest cartoons as selected by 1,000 animation professionals.

Other early cartoon artists in the auction are Winsor McCay (Little Nemo on Slumberland). McCay is considered the father of cartoon art. Other artists represented are George Wunder (Terry and the Pirates), Otto Soglow (The Little King) and Jose Delbo (Batgirl and Conan the Barbarian comic books).

One of the earliest humor magazines, giving rise to cartoon art, was "Puck" founded in the 1880s by artist Joseph Keppler. It was 16 pages with three full-color lithographed drawings in each issue. One of his artists, F. Opper, was considered the finest American cartoonist of his day.

Many collectors of original American illustrator art have added cartoons to their collections. This is especially true when collectors realize that illustrators like Charles Dana Gibson and Ralph Barton also did satirical illustrations that can be classified as one of the many forms of cartoon art.

Clues: Take a tip from Mort Walker who rescued those Hearst cartoons. They can turn up anywhere. Get familiar with the names and looks of early cartoon art. While most were pen and ink, black and white, as early as the 1890s water colors were used. A good reference source is "The International Museum of Cartoon Art."

An illustrated auction catalog is available from Guernsey's for $35 including postage. Phone orders (212) 794-2280.

plants and odd items. Wire is preferred over the colored plastic-coated wire baskets.

"Produce signs are really in demand, especially those printed with the words eggs, apples, beans, or potatoes," Krizan said. "I can't get enough of them."

The cottage look is quite popular in porches.

"The cottage look is affordable and usable, which is why it is popular," Krizan said.

White painted furniture and printed tablecloths from the 1950s are being used. Amish handhooked rugs and braided rugs are placed on porches to duplicate inside coziness.

Old wicker, after receding in popularity for a few years, is making a comeback if sales indicate demand according to Krizan. She has sold quite a few pieces in the last week.

The old wooden croquet sets are not only placed for aesthetic appeal but also are being used to play with family and friends.

Krizan admits that her private porch is overflowing with collectibles. She said, "My problem is that I want both my house and my shop to look good. In the past, I regretted selling things, so now if I find something wonderful at a good price, I keep it for myself."

And if Krizan grows tired of it, she can always sell it.

Her advice to those who inquire about what she foresees as being collectible in the future: "Don't throw anything away. There is a collector for everything."

Antiques Questions And Answers

What do you think the appraised retail value for five Hitchcock side chairs and one armchair could be? Markings on back of the seats is L. Hitchcock, Hitchcocksville, Conn.

Warranted. My grandmother bought them in the 1950s.

B.L.D., Naples, FL

The first "fancy" chairs as they were called, later "Hitchcock" were made in 1835. They have been reproduced ever since. If yours were made in the 19th century they could sell at auction for over $2,000 the set. Repros could sell for $600 the set.

This painted chest, dated 1811 was a wedding present to my mother's grandparents in 1841. It is in all original condition.

It was made in Norway. The lid is hand carved. Can you tell me the value ?

G.J., Staten Island, NY

What a wonderful example of Norwegian folk art! The colorful motifs so well executed could make it worth an auction price $5,000 and up.

I have a playbill from 1952 of Judy Garland's appearance at the RKO Palace.

Does it have any value ?

M.R., Randolph, MA

A collector of Judy Garland memorabilia could pay $50-75.

I have a covered china casserole stamped: "Limoges, France, I.R.I."

It is within an oval. Is it authentic or a copy ?

J.F., Hingham, MA

Limoges porcelain has never stopped being made. I researched the old factory marks and couldn't find yours. While it is Limoges it is 20th century.

In one of your recent Q&A answers to a reader concerning prices for records you mentioned the Price Guides but not where to find them. Help!

A.M.G., Braintree, MA

They are found in the reference departments of public libraries, Antiques and collectible sections of major book stores. Book stores will be happy to order a copy of Price Guide to 45 RPM Records by Tim Neely, published by Krause Publications. Or, write the publisher at 700 E. State St., Iola, WI, 54990-0001. They will send you a catalog listing all their publications.

I have a straight razor over 100 years old in the original box. It is marked, H.J. Cannon, Dedham,

Questions And Answers

Mass. Has an ivory handle. What is it worth?

R.C., Quincy, MA

There is a wide range of prices for old straight razors.

Things that add to the value are designs on the handle; material handle is made of and well known makers, original box and overall condition. Yours could have a shop value of $50.

In 1946, at the end of WWII while in Germany, a farmer gave me an unusual pipe that has a porcelain bowl with a painting of a hunter, woman and dog.

Can you tell me anything about it and value?

L.M., Quincy, MA

Your late 19th century porcelain bowl pipe could sell for over $600 in a shop.

I have a small perfume bottle probably from the early 1940s. It is a three-inch high "Prince Matchabelli," "Ave Maria," never opened. It has the cross stopper. Is it worth selling or passing on to the grandchildren?

S.S., Quincy, MA

The current shop price would be around $25. Save it for the grandchildren.

Prices can only go up.

My grandmother's farm house is going to be torn down and among the things I found in the attic are four brass wall gas lamps. Do they have any value?

T.C., Cincinnati, OH

Old gas light fixtures are being electrified and sought by people restoring 19th century houses. They can sell at auction for as much as $300 a pair.

I found a chrome shelf clock at the flea market that somebody told me was made in the 1930s in the "Art Deco" style. It works. I paid $25 is it a treasure?

B.F.M., Cincinnati, OH

Art Deco has become a "catch all" term for a variety of styles made during the 1920s, 30s. Many internationally famous designers created beautiful objects using the new mass production methods for wealthy clients.

By the 1930s Art Deco style filtered down to the general public as utilitarian objects. Your clock could sell at auction for around $150.

LANCASTER COUNTY CARRIAGE AND ANTIQUE AUCTION

THURS., JULY 19, 2001 • 8:30 AM

To be held in Lancaster County, PA on the Elam Petersheim farm at 201-A Belmont Road, Gordonville, PA, one mile south of Intercourse.

WANTED Good clean consignments including: Carriages, buggies, sleighs, wagons, good antique items, blacksmith tools, new and used tools and equipment. Any horse and Carriage related items, wheels, poles, shafts, lamps, books, china, harness, saddles and tack.

NO JUNK, APPLIANCES, OR FARM EQUIPMENT Except antique and primitive items like old hay wagons, walking plows, etc.

Consignments will be accepted Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, July 16, 17 and 18, 2001.

Plan now to attend this interesting Country Auction which will be held in a relaxed farm setting. Last year we had a nice selection of merchandise including approximately 70 vehicles, lots of carriage and driving related items and lots of antique tools, collectibles, etc. There were two auctioneers selling all day. There was lots and lots of delicious homemade food and ice cream sold which benefited a local cause.

If you plan on consigning any carriages, please notify us well in advance so we can have at least a partial listing on hand when people call to inquire what carriages will be sold. There will be no catalog, but maybe a pictured flyer if response is good and time allows.

We will need your support to make this auction a success!

We wish to extend a heart-felt thanks to everyone that supported this event last year as it were, some by consigning, some by purchasing and a lot of you just by being there!!

For more information, or to list consignments, please contact someone below:

Polaris Introduces Two New Utility Vehicles For 2001

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. — Whether your goal is to fish for aquatic life, hunt for wildlife or just get away from everyday life, the Polaris Ranger is the best vehicle to get outdoor enthusiasts to where they want to be.

This year, Polaris is adding two new models to its popular 6x6 recreational and utility vehicle, the Polaris Ranger 2x4 and Polaris Ranger 4x4. Ideal for trekking through thick mud, maneuvering through a dense forest or crossing an unexpected stream, the entire Polaris Ranger line of all-terrain vehicles are every outdoor enthusiast's dream machine.

All three Polaris Ranger's feature powerful engines with world-famous Polaris Variable Transmission (PVT), long travel suspension, high ground clearance and heavy-duty, all-terrain tires to get up any hilly, rocky or other rough terrain with ease. With true four- and six-wheel-drive, Polaris Rangers are as ideal in mud as they are in sand, and can carry out difficult tasks, no matter the conditions.

For hunters, the Polaris Ranger's large dump box and up to 1,500 pounds of towing capacity can make a successful outing much easier and more enjoyable. Decking a Polaris Ranger out with a line of hunting accessories make it even better for long days in the woods and in the fields.

A dual gun scabbard mount designed specially for the Polaris Ranger offers quick and safe access to firearms from either side of the cab. With water- and dust-proof cargo boxes, any gear, from tents to firewood, can be carried without worry. And with the full camouflage cover, hunters are sure to see their target before their target sees them.

"All three vehicles in the Polaris Ranger family are perfect for dozens of outdoor activities," said Mitchell Johnson, ATV general manager. "It's an obvious fit for all kinds of hunters, but it's also great for dragging an ice fishing house across a lake or just trail riding with the family on a weekend afternoon. And when leisure time is over, Polaris Ranger is always ready to help out with the chores at home."

Information about the complete line of Polaris products is available from authorized Polaris dealers or from the Polaris Industries Inc. home page on the Internet at: www.polarisindustries.com.

Farmers Union Joins Call To Dispel Estate Tax Myth

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Farmers Union officials recently joined Sens. Kent Conrad, D-N.D., and Byron Dorgan, D-N.D., to dispel the myth that repeal of the estate tax will help preserve family farms. While the call to preserve family farms has been the driving force behind the repeal attempt, the estate tax rarely applies to family farmers and ranchers and is not the cause of the liquidation of farm and ranch operations.

"It is simply not true that family farms are being lost because of estate tax obligations," said Leland Swenson, president of the National Farmers Union. "This is a tax break for the extremely wealthy. If we spend this time providing tax breaks for the ultra-wealthy in America, there will be nothing left to provide for good schools, hospitals and economic development in rural America and nothing with which to write a decent farm bill."

Proponents of estate tax repeal recently said that elimination of the tax is important because the tax prevents farmers from passing along their operations to the heirs. In reality, the estate tax applies to very few farms and ranches and has not caused the liquidation of farms as proponents suggest. Additionally, the estate tax repeal plan passed by the house, H.R. 8, would not eliminate the tax for another 10 years.

National Farmers Union supports immediately increasing the estate tax exemption to cover estates valued at $4 million per person, which results in an exemption of $8 million per couple. That level would protect the estates of virtually every family farm from any estate tax hardship faced by the farmers and small businesses.

7 Case IH Products Named For 'Outstanding Innovation'

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — Seven Case IH products recently were awarded Resource magazine's AE50 honors for outstanding innovation in agricultural, food and biological product and systems technology.

"Case IH products were recognized more than any other ag equipment manufacturer," said Marlin Maclay, general manager of Chambersburg Farm Service. Chambersburg Farm Service has been a Case IH dealer for 31 years. The Carlisle location has been in business for over 15 years.

Innovations making the elite list were:

- MX Series Magnum™ tractors, which combine high performance features with operator comfort.
- Cyclo Air® meter attachment, a highly economical all-crop seeding system.
- SDX30 single disk no-till air drill, a low disturbance, single-disk planting tool that can penetrate high-residue conditions.
- 8880 self-propelled (SP) windrower with 725 rotary disc hay header, an efficient and high-productivity system for hay cutting and conditioning.
- RS "One" Series variable chamber round balers, which use a wide pickup for better packing on the bale sides and cleaner capture of the windrow.
- 2000 Advanced Farming Systems (AFS) yield monitor system, which helps farmers keep close tabs on harvest operations for improved management.
- AFS Instant Application Map™ 2000 Software, which allows farmers to create customized input rate prescriptions for variable-rate seed and fertilizer placement.

The prestigious AE50 awards go to the 50 best products for agricultural, food, biological and related systems available on the market for the first time in 1999. Companies from around the world submit entries to the annual competition, and a panel of international engineering experts chooses the best products. Recipients were featured in the summer issue of Resource, the publication of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers (ASAE).

"All Case IH products begin with customer input to find what is really needed out in the field," said Marlin Maclay. "The engineers build tractors, implements and software that help farmers increase their productivity and success."

"At CFS, we, too, are committed to helping our customers reach the maximum level of productivity possible through high-quality products and services."

Resource magazine sponsors the AE50 award program to emphasize the crucial role of new products and systems in bringing advanced technology to the marketplace. All entries must exhibit a new technology or advancement of a previous technology, and have a broad impact on the industry.

The judging panel of ASAE experts come from a broad range of fields and rank entries based on the criteria of commercial impact, contribution to the agricultural and engineering industries, advancements in engineering, and technological significance.

Travelers Can Help Prevent U.S. FMD Outbreak

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — What can American travelers — especially those who live in a rural or agricultural area — do to avoid carrying home the foot and mouth disease (FMD) virus that could cost billions of dollars in lost agricultural production and trade?

Dr. Robert Heckert, former chief of foreign animal disease diagnosis for the Canadian Food Inspection Agency and current faculty member at the VMRCVM, urges following a couple of simple precautions.

First, follow established U.S. Department of Agriculture regulations that prohibit travelers from bringing meats, meat products, cheeses, plants, and various other potentially hazardous products into the United States. Airlines provide complete information on these restrictions to passengers.

USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service sampled 20,515 passengers traveling to the United States from the United Kingdom in 1999 as part of their Agriculture Quarantine Inspection Monitoring program. Of these passengers, 462 were carrying potentially hazardous items, such as meat, cheese, or hides, with them.

Twenty-two of these individuals reported plans to visit or work on a farm or ranch while in the United States.

Second, if you travel to the United Kingdom, avoid rural areas. Many parts of England, Scotland, Wales, and Northern Ireland are already off limits to locals and tourists alike as part of an effort to prevent the spread of foot-and-mouth disease.

If you do visit the countryside, take an inexpensive pair of comfortable shoes with you that you can leave behind before you fly home. The FMD virus can survive in dry fecal material for 14 days in the summer, which means you could inadvertently track home the disease.

Limit the clothes you wear on or near farms to one or two outfits that you can launder before your return flight or leave behind. If neither of these options is possible, launder or dry clean your clothes as soon as you return home. And most importantly, says Heckert, avoid contact with susceptible animals, such as cattle, sheep, and goats, for at least seven days.

Hueston believes the risk of an FMD outbreak in the United States is small. "But," he says, "given the potentially devastating economic impact of the disease, it only makes sense for Americans traveling to the United Kingdom to take steps to reduce the risk even further."

Accelerated Genetics Celebrates 60 Years Of Industry Leadership

BARABOO, Wis. — In March of 2001, Accelerated Genetics celebrated 60 years of industry leadership. The 60-year evolution has included a never-ending pioneering spirit from the very beginning that still exists today. Now the pioneering spirit is called "vision" and much of Accelerated Genetics' success and existence is due to that forward planning strategy.

Accelerated Genetics' past has been one of innovation and early adoption. Following are examples of some of their leadership areas in the AI industry:

- The first organized young sire proving program (today's PACE).
- One of the first to provide a mating program (today's GEMpc).
- One of the first cooperatives to work with World-Wide Sires, and now 30 years later will be one of the new owners of this global marketing network.
- The first to offer a complete line of farm products that compliment their genetic offering.
- The first in the U.S. to utilize computerized freezing.
- One of the first to offer direct service to customers.
- The first to offer a complete beef progeny test program with both performance and carcass traits (EDGE).
- Formed Genetic Visions, Inc., Accelerated Genetics' in-house research subsidiary, considered the pioneer in genetic marker research.
- The first well-organized sexed semen trial in the U.S.
- A model Young Producer Program — its success is the envy of most.

During Accelerated Genetics' 60 years of business, service has been the cornerstone from the beginning. Today, and in the future, even greater service is the priority and their approach is one of "full service" for all herds.

"Our visionary attitude is one that says we are willing to investigate, evaluate, and either implement, rethink, or accept that no fit exists. This means that much time is spent in listening and looking for input," stated Roger Ripley, Accelerated Genetics' president and chief executive officer. "This is one of the key cooperative features of Accelerated Genetics. It is often said that the biggest advantage of cooperatives today is the opportunity for input and that your input can make a difference in the company operations. This is our goal."

The best genetics, broad selection, top-quality products, cutting-edge technology, and unmatched service remain the priorities for the future of Accelerated Genetics. Ripley added, "And, yes — these are only possible if we continue to recruit and maintain the very best employee base in the industry. Our people, whether dedicated and visionary employees or our loyal and much appreciated customer base, will remain our greatest asset." Accelerated Genetics, where "Innovation Breeds Excellence®."

Marketing Contracts On The Increase

Nearly three out of four market hogs are sold under some type of prearranged marketing arrangement.

The University of Missouri conducted a checkoff-funded research study on behalf of the National Pork Board and NPPC on hog marketing contracts used in January 2000.

Of all hogs slaughtered in January, 74.3 percent were sold on some type of prearranged marketing agreement, not on cash price.

A similar study in January 1999 showed 64.2 percent of total marketings were prearranged.

Biosecurity Essential To Saving Rare Breeds

PITTSBORO, N.C. — Protecting your stock from infectious disease is an important aspect of conservation. The activities and strategies employed in preventing disease transmission constitutes a biological security program.

Biosecurity is important at all times, but the crises in the European Union resulting from the outbreak of foot and mouth disease (FMD) makes this topic especially pertinent.

Biosecurity is one of the most difficult management concepts to consistently employ, but is especially critical for owners of rare breeds because these small population make them especially vulnerable. Teaching and talking about biosecurity is relatively easy. Doing it is difficult, but that should not dissuade farmers from establishing a program.

Do not be intimidated by your inability to implement a comprehensive program. A minimal biosecurity program implemented in increments is better than no program at all.

Livestock owners should observe these guidelines at all times, but especially when there has been an outbreak of an infectious disease:

- First and foremost, use common sense. Do not bring germs to your animals and do not bring your animals to germs.
- Post a sign at the gate or entrance to your farm and at the animal facilities that tells people that your animals are important and you are trying to prevent disease transfer.
- Limit contact with other animals. Clean and disinfect your clothes and boots following contact.
- Limit your visits to other farms, and clean and disinfect your clothes and boots following visits.
- When buying stock, establish a quarantine area on your farm. Do chores associated with these animals last. Clean and disinfect your clothes and boots following these chores, then shower.
- Do not share tools or equipment with other farmers. If sharing high-priced items is absolutely necessary, thoroughly clean and disinfect the equipment (tires included) before they leave your farm and before allowing them back on your farm.
- Exercise control over visitors' access to your animals.
- Install a farm gate and lock it.
- Wash down and disinfect all vehicles entering the farm. Should we have an outbreak of FMD, clean and disinfect feed trucks, delivery vehicles, gas meter reader, and all other vehicles before allowing them on your farm. If you drive off your farm, disinfect your vehicle before re-entering your farm.

In the event of an outbreak of an infectious disease, all of the above guidelines should be enhanced and rigidly enforced. There should be no outside contact and no visitors. Clean and disinfect all incoming people and vehicles — without exception.

Some viruses can survive in the human respiratory tract for several days. Should there be a disease outbreak, you should not expose yourself to diseased animals, or to people who have worked with diseased animals, and then care for your own animals.

The disaster resulting from reportable diseases like FMD would be compounded if endangered breeds of livestock and poultry are destroyed and their survival further threatened. Plan for their safekeeping today.

NCGA Requests $50 Million For Plant Biotechnology/Genomics Research

WASHINGTON, D.C. - The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) recently requested that a House subcommittee allocate $50 million for research on plant genomics and plant biotechnology in the FY 2002 budget.

Delaware, Ohio, farmer Gary Davis, DVM, Ph.D., - who is a member of the NCGA's Customer and Business Development Action Team - told the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Foreign Operations, Export Financing and Related Programs that this investment could help alleviate human suffering.

Citing statistics showing that two billion people worldwide suffer from malnutrition and vitamin deficiencies, Davis said, "Much of this human suffering can be alleviated in a sustainable manner if we were to (1) increase U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) funding for plant genomics and plant biotechnology research to increase yields, enhance micronutrients in food, and create "edible vaccines,' and (2) if we were to target funding for the training of scientists and plant breeders from developing countries in biotechnology."

"We have opportunities with plant biotechnology to deliver "edible vaccines' without the need for any of complicated handling procedures, without the need for refrigeration or sterile equipment, and we can deliver them in a sustainable manner through the regeneration of plants," Davis said. He cited an example where plant biotechnology has made significant advances in delivering the Hepatitis B vaccine in corn and bananas and the cholera vaccine in potatoes.

This research has other benefits, such as the development of crops that can endure droughts, pests and plant diseases that can devastate crops, leading often to population-wide starvation. And Davis said that the fruit of this research is not entirely altruistic. "When scientists solve these problems in poor countries, they not only help people feed themselves and move up from poverty, they help ensure safe harvests across our own country."

The Davis testimony was also made on behalf of the American Farm Bureau Federation and the American Society of Plant Physiologists.

Corn Growers Praise Bioenergy Budget

ST. LOUIS, Mo. - The National Corn Growers Association (NCGA) is praising Secretary of Energy Spence Abraham for recognizing the important role plant and crop-based products can assume in the future of U.S. energy.

The Department of Energy (DOE) budget calls for reducing the Industries of the Future budget by 36 percent; however Secretary Abraham successfully protected the DOE Ag Vision 2020 program from any cuts. The Ag Vision program focuses on helping ag, forestry and chemical industries increase the use of crops instead of petroleum as feedstocks to produce consumer goods including plastics, paint and adhesives. The program's goal is for plants to become the source of 10 percent of chemical feedstocks by 2020.

"Every product we produce from plants increases the amount of petroleum that is available for other uses and benefits the environment with renewables," said NCGA President Lee Klein, a farmer from Battle Creek, Neb. "Long-term we can increase farm income by several billion dollars if we use plants instead of petroleum for 10 percent of the industrial market."

In addition to protecting the Ag Vision program, Secretary Abraham included $5 million in the budget for an integrated Bioproducts/Bioenergy program. This will support research and development projects to use plants instead of petroleum for chemical feedstocks, bio-based fuels such as ethanol, and other bio-based sources of energy.

"The NCGA has been a leader in the effort to focus research on renewables as a source of industrial feedstocks. The Ag Vision and Bioproducts/Bioenergy programs will decrease oil imports, reduce greenhouse gas emissions, increase recycling opportunities and create new industries here in the United States," Klein explained.

"Corn Growers are pleased that the Secretary recognizes the importance that crops such as corn can play in the production of chemical feedstocks," he continued. "And, NCGA achieved a major victory with the preservation of the Ag Vision program and the bioenergy initiative in the DOE budget."

Klein said NCGA will continue to work through the appropriations process to gain additional funding for corn in the DOE Ag Vision program and the Bioproducts initiative.

Customize Your Bales

Without Paying Extra

Variable Chamber Balers Let You Make The Call.

If you demand a smaller hay package and a baler that's easy to operate, the New Idea® 4643 (4'x3') and 4644 (4'x4') are for you. Thanks to the variable bale size, you can customize bales to fit your operation. And each model creates bales that range from 30 to over 50 inches in diameter.

With so much diversity, you'll only bale the size you need. Their low-profile, full-width pickup glides easily over fields, catching every stem. The pickup height can be easily adjusted.

For more details on the versatile 4643 and 4644 round balers, visit your AGCO® New Idea dealer today.

The SIGNATURE 6000 may be the only rock picker you'll ever need This is the most rugged rock picker on the market. Some of the SIGNATURE 6000 features include·

Solid Shaft Grill Tines with Replaceable Grill Tips - This modern grill is easier to maintain, has longer life giving you less down time. The unique grill provides five feet of clean sifting and virtually jamless performance.

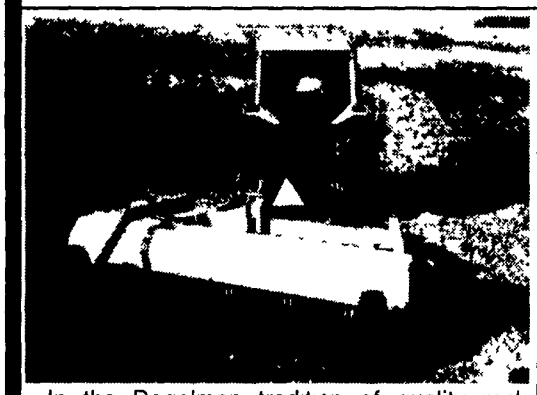
Grated Hopper Bottom - We use spring steel straps in the hopper, engineered to bounce back in shape.

Hydraulic Drive - The most popular drive on rock pickers is hydraulic which is standard on the 6000. We have incorporated a relief valve to take away the shock when disengaging the drive.

Reel Assembly - The three paddle reel has a large diameter, hard surfaced teeth and heavy duty paddles.

Flotation Tires - The 16.5L x 16.1 flotation tires are standard equipment and are a must to reduce soil compaction.

Swing Pole - Easy to maneuver in both working or transport position. Degelman



In the Degelman tradition of quality rock removal equipment, here is the RR1500 rock rake, another example of Degelman's continuing commitment to excellence.

The RR1500 rock rake includes a unique auto-fold system which provides safe, easy transport no wider than most tractors (8 feet in transport position) with full use of the 14 foot width in the working position. And with hydraulic angling, it can take full advantage of the 10 to 30 degree angling range.

Degelman Rock Rakes are excellent machines for grooming fairways and conditioning soil for the construction of golf courses It leaves a beautiful final finish preparing the course for seeding They are also used for reclaiming gravel on gravel roads. And the heavy duty construction and quality workmanship means that it is built to last

On The Mark, Get Set, Grow!

The 6100 Series Rigid And Vertical Fold Planters.

Precision farming starts with precision seed placement. And that's exactly what you'll get with the White 6100 Series planters. Our pull-type planters feature an exclusive air-metering system that's designed to singulate every seed. Its low air pressure, edge-drop seed discs and short, 18" seed drop ensure precise seed placement for maximum germination.

Adaptable To Any Tillage Situation.

Our 4, 6, 8 and 12 row planters have the flexibility to meet most tillage practices both now and in the future. They're built rugged with a massive 7" x 7" frame and strong, welded-tongue design to handle the demands of heavy residue. Add a 6900 splitter attachment for interplant capability.

This season get the planter that places each seed where it'll grow the best — and perform the best. Stop by your AGCO® White Planter dealer today.

Outstanding features include:

- Independent modular cutterbar with ten small-diameter cutting discs
- 102" wide conditioning rolls
- A full range of vertical and lateral flotation
- A torsion-bar, roll-pressure system
- A cutterbar driven from both ends

Massey Ferguson Dealers Meet In Dallas

ATLANTA, Ga. - Massey Ferguson® dealers from across Canada and the U.S. assembled in Dallas, Texas this spring for a first-hand look at the many new products and product features available to meet the needs of their customers in 2001 and beyond.

In addition to the many new and upgraded MF tractor and harvesting products on display, engineering personnel from Massey Ferguson manufacturing facilities in Europe, Asia and North America were present to review advanced quality control procedures and answer dealer questions.

There were also exhibits from the company's North American parts and finance organizations, and management personnel from these operations provided information on new and improved programs to assist dealers in support of their customers.

"In today's depressed agricultural market, many companies are in a holding position with new product development," said Jerry McLeod, vice president Massey Ferguson marketing, North America. "Massey Ferguson and AGCO Corporation, the parent company, see this period as an opportunity to continue to engineer and produce products with the advanced technology needed now and in future years to meet the increased productivity demanded by customers in many diverse markets."

"New and upgraded products across Massey Ferguson's entire tractor line, from 16 to 225 horsepower, were introduced, as were new self-propelled and pull-type swathers and innovative new combine headers," explained McLeod. "Of equal importance was the input we received from dealers on new products now in the development stage, and on the market potential for products in the planning stage."

The theme of the meeting, "A Matter of Pride," reflected Massey Ferguson's long history in agricultural equipment, and focused on the future.

A few of the new products and new product features include:

- The new MF 3300 Series of specialty tractors from 49 to 84 horsepower, with wheel spacings that can be set for narrow-row and vineyard and orchard applications;
- New spray-certified cabs for orchard tractors that meet ASAE S525 requirements;
- New Quadlink™ front suspension and new 32 speed Dynashuttle™ transmission with AutoDrive™ for 100- to 145-PTO-hp tractors;
- Three new tractor models added to the mid-range tractor lineup at 45, 59 and 69 PTO hp with new productive features as standard equipment;
- Expanded attachment lineup for MF 1200 Series compact tractors, 17 to 40 PTO hp;
- Fieldstar® ready MF combines for customers planning to use the latest GPS and Precision Agriculture techniques;
- A wide range of combine grain tables and corn heads, and pickup, draper and stripper headers;
- And, a new self-propelled 220XL Swather with Grammer air suspension seat, quieter cab, and new hydro-control handle.

Forrester Farm Equipment Celebrates Silver Anniversary

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — This year is a time of celebration for Forester Farm Equipment Ltd., located here.

Not only does it mark the company's 25th anniversary, but this year, at the annual customer appreciation open house celebration at the end of March, more than 500 attended.

The celebration, a tradition for the New Holland equipment and parts dealer, brought in customers who purchased nine pieces of equipment. "We sold more than $20,000 of parts on the day of the open house," said Cory Forrester, president.

Jay Forrester, who founded the business in October 1976, passed away in an auto accident in August. Since then, his wife Barbara and their children decided to reorganize and expand the family business.

Now the company employs 17 full-time and two part-time. Cory, president, oversees company operations. Linda Forrester Porter is finance manager. Curt Forrester is shop manager. Lisa Forrester Stoner is office manager. And Jason Forrester is company sales representative.

The company, with more than 500 customers, includes a showroom with 6,000 square feet with a comparatively sized shop.

This time is the busiest of the season, noted Cory. He said that, with the sales of compact tractors and lawn equipment at the beginning of spring, they've been too busy to realize the 25th anniversary is here.

"We'd like to expand," Forrester said. "There's room for expansion here." He said future expansion could include opening a satellite store.

Cyagra Acquires Em Tran Biotech Firm

WORCESTER, Mass. — Cyagra LLC announces the acquisition of Em Tran Inc. of Elizabethtown. Cyagra plans to produce cloned calves at the Em Tran facility.

"Cyagra has new exciting technologies to augment our cattle reproductive services, staff expertise and systems," said Dr. Boyd Henderson, general manager. "Proprietary technology and the expertise of Cyagra's staff will allow us to accelerate development of practical solutions for today's dairy and beef producers."

"We are extremely excited to get the opportunity to work with the premier embryo transfer and in vitro fertilization business in the cattle industry," said Rob Saglio, Cyagra's chief operating officer. "We think our combined research, development and production experience will help dairy and beef producers get the most from their genetics."

Em Tran has provided reproductive services including embryo transfer (ET) to dairy and beef producers since 1978. In 1992, they successfully started in vitro fertilization (IVF) at their lab and have a 95 percent success rate on more than 300 donor animals experiencing infertility problems.

Em Tran, Inc.'s commercial operations serve both dairy and beef producers. They are a global leader in IVF, ET, and embryo sexing. They have exported more than 25,000 embryos from 12 cattle breeds to more than 20 countries. Em Tran has been awarded the Pennsylvania Governor's Export Award multiple times. They have a full service lab, donor and recipient housing, ET, IVF, embryo sexing, recessive testing, and embryo storage and shipment service at their Elizabethtown facilities. They have animal housing on-site for several hundred cattle.

"We now offer our clients cell line development and storage, genotyping and calf cloning in addition to our traditional ET, IVF and sexing services" said Steve Mower, Em Tran director of export and promotion.

Cyagra, the livestock division of Advanced Cell Technology (ACT) is headquartered in Worcester, Mass. with an office in Manhattan, Kan. Cyagra and ACT produced the world's first cloned transgenic calves with their proprietary biotechnology in 1998. In January of this year, they successfully cloned the first endangered species, a gaur ox, using a cow in Iowa as a recipient.

Several weeks ago, Cyagra announced the birth of two clones of Con-Acres-HS Zita-ET. The cloned Holstein calves, born in February at the University of Pennsylvania College of Veterinary Medicine, are healthy and vigorous at their Futuraland 2020 Holsteins home in Williamsport, Md. Futuraland is owned and operated by the Greg and Charles Wiles families.

Combined, Cyagra, ACT, and Em Tran hold more than 160 domestic and international patents including the most extensive mammalian cloning patent ever issued. Their preeminent scientific team includes scientists who are global authorities on bovine cloning, gene expression, aging, telomeres, molecular biology, nuclear transfer, reprogramming and gene knockout. They have earmarked $6 million dollars for bovine research and development with the primary goal of making cloning affordable for most cattle producers.

New Idea Expands Round Baler Line

Atlanta, Ga. — Renowned for their 4800 Series fixed-chamber round balers, which create bales with a unique star-shaped center, New Idea® recently expanded its round baler line with the release of an equally innovative line of variable-chamber models.

Comprised of five new models, the New Idea 6300 Series line-up is designed to build solid, high-density bales that offer easy handling and better weatherability. Bale size ranges from 550 to 2,200 pounds and 30- to 72-inches in diameter.

At the top of the line are the new 6364 and 6365 automatic balers, which incorporate a self-contained hydraulic system that automatically wraps, disengages the drive, ejects the bale, closes the tailgate and reengages the drive system. The operator need only stop the tractor, push a button and wait until the drive signal reappears.

Offering automatic baling in two sizes, the Model 6365 produces round bales that measure 61.5-inches in width by up to 72-inches in diameter, while bales produced by the Model 6364 measure 46.5-inches in width by up to 72-inches in diameter and weigh up to 1,660 pounds each.

New Idea 6343 Round Baler.

For those with more modest needs, New Idea offers the new Model 6345. Like the 6364, it comes with a 78-inch wide, low-profile pickup that sweeps up every stem in the windrow into a 46.5-inch wide bale chamber. Maximum bale diameter, however, is limited to 60-inches and bale weight is limited to around 1,140 pounds.

Despite its smaller size and manual operation, the 6345 is surprisingly packed with amenities. Standard features include hydraulic density control for solid, water-shedding bales; dual twine arms that incorporate positive twine cutoff, and storage for up to eight balls of twine. For even more versatility, customers can add a hydraulic pickup lift, mesh wrap and the choice of a hydraulic bale ejector or a bale ramp kit.

Shared features on the 6345, 6364 and 6365 also include centering augers, which permit the use of an extra-wide pickup; stuffer fingers that help lift the crop into the bale chamber, and a new hydraulically actuated slip clutch. Large 16" x 6.5" x 8" gauge wheels, which help the pickup glide over uneven ground, are also standard equipment.

Hoober Adds Hay, Forage Equipment To Lines

INTERCOURSE (Lancaster Co.) and McALISTERVILLE (Juniata Co.) — Hoober, Inc., is celebrating its 60th anniversary of serving Intercourse and McAlisterville area customers with quality equipment, extensive parts availability, and experienced equipment maintenance and repair services.

This new Hesston product line has the features and accessories that meet the needs of customers, according to Hoober.

Adding these products is also in keeping with the company's goal of serving as a one-stop resource for agricultural equipment and maintaining overall customer satisfaction.

Mark Bonson, parts manager, McAlisterville, said the dealership will stock replacement parts for owners of Hesston products, and maintain a parts inventory for new equipment purchasers.

According to Dick Bomberger, parts manager of Hoober, Inc. in Intercourse, "For equipment-down emergencies, parts can be sourced from any of 12 strategically-located North American parts warehouses," he said. "Most of these parts orders are shipped the same day they are placed."

Don Carper, service manager, Intercourse, and the dealership's service technicians are experienced at performing professional maintenance and repair work on agricultural equipment. The department is fully equipped to service the new Hesston product line.

Farm Bureau Applauds N.Y. Ag Budget Proposal

GLENMONT, N.Y. — The New York State Senate has announced the Empire State Farm Assistance Program, setting $70 million aside to enhance the economic development of one of our state's most important industries — agriculture. The Senate initiative, when fully effective, will save farmers $40 million in taxes and will provide $30 million to agriculture for economic development assistance.

"Senate Majority Leader Bruno and Senate Agriculture Committee Chairwoman Hoffmann have demonstrated their commitment to agriculture through this budget proposal," stated John W. Lincoln, President of New York Farm Bureau. "Farms do not typically qualify for traditional economic development programs. Our farms welcome this targeted economic development assistance as it will help the industry to ensure profitability in an increasingly competitive local and global marketplace."

The Senate's agriculture proposal consists of four parts: the Agricultural Systems Initiative, Strategic Farm Planning and Grant Program, targeted tax relief, and continued support for existing programs.

New York Farm Bureau, along with other agricultural organizations, has worked to develop the Agricultural Systems Initiative, a program designed to provide farmers with the best agricultural knowledge in the country. Funding for the program in the first year is $7.5 million, growing to $15 million in the program's third year. With this funding, Cornell University's Cooperative Extension will be better equipped to provide technical information about agricultural research and technology, marketing and labor issues.

The Strategic Farm Planning and Grant Program would initially provide $6 million in the fist year and grow to $15 million in the third year, and would provide targeted assistance directly to farms for business planning. This program would team farmers with professionals representing agriculture, finance, marketing, management and environmental sciences to develop and implement effective business plans.

In addition to the Governor's proposal, which includes funding for several targeted tax cuts, such as expansion of the School Property Tax Credit program, the Senate is proposing several new tax cuts for agriculture. They include Refundable Group Health Insurance Credit — $15 million; Refundable Investment Tax Credit — $2 million; Christmas Tree Farm School Property Tax Credit — $100,000; and Thoroughbred Breeding and Development Fund — $7 million.

In addition, the Senate is also proposing additional support for existing agricultural programs around the state. The Senate proposal expands the Governor's extensive Executive Budget proposal for agriculture. Included programs are: additional funds for Agriculture in the Classroom, Apiary Research, North Country Agriculture, N.Y. Apple Association, Onion Research, Cattle Herd Health Assurance, Wine and Grape Foundation, Central N.Y. AgriTourism and Education, Johne's Disease Program, and a NYS Turfgrass industry survey.

$1 Million Awarded In State Conservation Grants

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Rep. Raymond Bunt Jr. has applauded the more than $1 million in state grants awarded for conservation easements and a park project in the 147th Legislative District.

The Department of Conservation and Natural Resources (DCNR) awarded $285,000 to the Montgomery County Lands Trust for a conservation easement on 165 acres of land in Lower Frederick Township, the Spring Mountain Camp, and $800,000 to the National Lands Trust for a conservation easement on 880 acres in Marlborough Township, the Musser Scout Reservation.

"I'm very pleased to see the state is providing funds for these critically important open space and habitat preservation projects in Montgomery County," Bunt said.

"As a long-time advocate of protecting open space in our county, I strongly support these conservation easement projects and applaud the Montgomery County Lands Trust and the Natural Lands Trust for their strategic alliance that is working to protect the most critical and threatened natural areas in the county."

"The Musser Scout Reservation, in particular, is a priority natural region that deserves preservation. Its large size and the quality of its forest, the Unami Creek and other natural resources make it a true regional treasure."

The scout reservation is home to Camp Delmont, Camp Garrison and Camp Hart. It has been the site of scout activities since the early part of the last century.

"This conservation easement will help ensure that the land remains protected open space in perpetuity," Bunt said. "This state funding is a testament to the hard work and commitment of the lands trust and others, without whose vision and dedication to conserving our natural resources these projects never would have been possible."

Towamencin Township also received a state grant. It will get $98,000 to restore Fischer's Park. The funds are for a playground, a gazebo, an addition to the existing rest facility, installment of ADA access, picnic tables, landscaping and sign and other related improvements.

The grants are provided by DCNR through the Community Conservation Partnerships Program. The program provides financial and technical assistance to municipal governments and local organizations for parks, recreation, conservation and greenways projects.

The National Junior Gelbvieh Classic attracts youth ages 7 to 21 from across the nation for a week of leadership contests and cattle shows. The last two Junior Classics have seen record attendance and numbers of cattle. This year in Rapid City will be no exception.

The events kick off with opening ceremonies on Mon., July 9. That evening will feature a bus trip to the Mount Rushmore Lighting Ceremony. The next three days feature a variety of contests including livestock judging, team fitting, photography contest, poster contest, quiz bowl, advertising, sales talk, showmanship and impromptu speaking.

The week tops off with the steer show on Thurs., July 12 and the breeding heifer and bred and owned bull show on Fri., July 13. Clint Rusk of West Lafeyette, Ind., will judge this year's show. The final event of the week will be the Awards Banquet and State Basket Auction Friday evening.

To participate in this year's Black Hills Gold Classic, a youth must be between the ages of 7 and 21 by Jan. 1, 2001. If you are not currently a member of the American Gelbvieh Junior Association, you must become an AGJA member by June 18. Contact the American Gelbvieh Association office for a membership application. To show cattle at this year's Classic, the cattle must be in the youth's name by June 1, 2001.

For more information on the AGJA Black Hills Gold Classic or to join the American Gelbvieh Junior Association, contact Patrick Doyle at the AGA office, (303) 465-2333 or email patrickd@gelbvieh.org. A tentative schedule is available to view on the AGA website at www.gelbvieh.org.

N.Y. Farm Bureau Applauds House Vote To Eliminate Death Taxes

GLENMONT, N.Y. — New York Farm Bureau, the largest general farm advocacy organization in the state, commends the U.S. House of Representatives for their vote to repeal the death tax. Death taxes impose a tremendous burden on family farmers and other small business owners who pour their lives into building something for their families, only to lose that gift at the time of their death. Repeal of this tax can erase the burdens and uncertainties associated with estate tax planning.

"Due to the current estate tax structure, surviving farm family members often have to sell land or equipment to generate enough money to pay the estate tax bill, ultimately devastating the farm," stated John W. Lincoln, president of New York Farm Bureau. "If the farmland is located near an urban center, as much of the farmland is in New York State, the sale often results in that farm ending up in the hands of developers."

The support from those New York Representatives who voted in favor of repealing the death tax to help save family farms is greatly appreciated by New York Farm Bureau. Needs across the country vary, and support from all members of the House of Representatives was difficult to acquire, but proved successful. Property values in New York are much higher than in other states. Therefore, estate taxes are much more draining to New York farmers and farmers in the northeast, making the issue a priority for the region. The bill to repeal death taxes will now need to be passed by the U.S. Senate and then signed by President Bush. The bill being considered now in the Senate will eliminate death taxes immediately.

"Elimination of the death tax and increase in the threshold is very much needed," added Lincoln. "Farming requires high operating costs to maintain the operation, making farmers rich in terms of land and equipment but at the same time cash poor. Capital is needed for constant reinvestment in order to maintain the farming operation and should not be needlessly taken away through death taxes."

Balance®Pro Gains Registration In Pennsylvania

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. — Balance Pro herbicide for corn is now available for use in Pennsylvania. Balance Pro is a low-dose, broad-spectrum herbicide for corn that controls more than 50 of the toughest weeds in corn, including foxtail, lambsquarters (including triazine-resistant species) waterhemp and velvetleaf when applied pre-plant or pre-emerge.

One of the product's unique characteristics is its ability to recharge. If weeds emerge during periods of dry weather, Balance Pro will recharge with as little as a half-inch of rain and control weeds up to two-inches tall.

"With some meteorologists predicting extended dry weather across the state in the next few weeks, that benefit may prove especially attractive to corn growers in Pennsylvania," said Rob Schrick, Balance Pro product lead for Aventis CropScience.

Balance Pro can be used in a one-pass program, as a burndown, in a tankmix, as an early pre-plant, a pre-plant incorporated or in a sequential program.

"Balance Pro is one of the most effective corn herbicides available," Schrick said," and now Pennsylvania corn growers will be able to benefit from its outstanding weed control."

Why Do Vaccines Fail?

Many commercial vaccines are available for use in a variety of dairy cattle of all ages and stages of lactation, and numerous infectious agents (also termed pathogens) are represented. Vaccines undergo a licensing process to insure their ability and effectiveness to protect against disease. Many of the pathogens affecting cows are well identified.

Nonetheless, at times the results in terms of protection seem less than adequate. How the immune system responds to a vaccine is a complex interaction of many types of cells, and the failure of just one small step in this interaction can result in poor immunity. When a disease outbreak occurs due to a pathogen against which the cows were vaccinated, the question arises, why didn't the vaccine protect our herd? There are several possible reasons.

1. The vaccine actually offered incomplete protection. Depending on the pathogen, some vaccines provide incomplete protection. This reduces the severity of infections, but may not necessarily prevent infections.

2. The wild (disease causing) type of the pathogen is a version that is not presented in the vaccine, so the immune system cannot recognize it sufficiently well to mount a memory response. Particularly for viruses, new strains can appear that were not previously used in development of commercially prepared vaccines.

3. The vaccine was not stored properly, had expired, or was not administered according to directions. Vaccines are more sensitive than many drugs with respect to storage temperature. Dry vaccines that are mixed and reconstituted with a solution should not be stored longer than the day they are mixed. Booster injections refer to a repeat vaccination, often within 2 to 4 weeks after the initial vaccination. 4. The vaccine was mixed with another vaccine or drug.This should never happen. If two vaccines are given, use two separate injection sites and syringes. Vaccines are a suspension that includes the pathogen and an adjuvant.

5. The cow's immune system wasn't competent, or "ready" to respond to the vaccination. Research has demonstrated that leukocytes from cows at calving have impaired function, and this includes the lymphocytes that are critical for memory and antibody production. Cows vaccinated at calving do not produce antibodies as well as cows vaccinated at other times in the lactation cycle.

6. The cows are given too many vaccines at one time.

In some herd situations, cows receive up to 15 different pathogen types during one vaccination session. It is uncertain what effect this has on the cow's ability to respond most effectively to any one pathogen. If less than desirable results are being achieved, it might be appropriate to reduce the number of vaccines administered at any one time.

Summary

- Some vaccines may not provide complete protection, but they may reduce mortality and economic loss compared with no vaccination.
- Some vaccines will not protect completely against new wild type pathogens (especially viruses).
- If vaccines are not stored at proper temperature and prepared exactly according to label, don't expect optimal protection.
- Never mix a single vaccine with other vaccine or drug preparations.
- Administer vaccines at the proper time in the animal's life cycle according to the label. Vaccination near the time of calving or during health disturbances or several infections should be avoided.
- It may not be most effective to give multiple different vaccines at the same time.
- Work with your veterinarian to determine the exact pathogen(s) causing problems when developing your comprehensive vaccination program.

Customer Practices Studied To Help Improve Beef Satisfaction

DENVER, Colo. — Three beef cuts have been studied through the checkoff to help better understand consumer likes and practices and increase demand for both higher-valued and underutilized cuts.

The research was conducted at a leading university and coordinated by the National Cattlemen's Beef Association under contract to the Cattlemen's Beef Board.

Goals of the "Beef Customer Satisfaction II" research were to:

- Determine the relationship of quality in lower-valued cuts such as the clod;
- Learn the value of preparation instructions on the top sirloin steak, which can be undesirably tough when overcooked;
- Investigate whether new technologies, such as calcium chloride injection, improve the top sirloin's tenderness when the product is prepared to a higher degree of doneness; and
- Determine whether calcium chloride injection could be used to enhance the acceptability of lower-priced steaks.

The research found that for the clod steak, in-home factors such as cooking methods and degrees of doneness influenced consumer satisfaction more than did the quality grade. Researchers concluded that preparation techniques that improve flavor without reducing tenderness improve customer satisfaction.

Customer satisfaction of top round steaks, meanwhile, were not improved by the introduction of the calcium chloride marinade.

Research found that flavor predominantly determined whether consumers liked the top sirloin steak, followed by tenderness and juiciness. Cooking method also had an influence on palatability of this cut, with fried being the method with the highest ratings and broiled being lowest. The calcium chloride marinade had no effect on tenderness or customer satisfaction.

Whether participants liked the flavor was the major factor driving customer satisfaction for all three categories of beef cuts analyzed.

Is Fertilizer Use Sustainable?

NORCROSS, Ga. — Record-high natural gas prices...ammonia plant shutdowns...supply and price uncertainty for nitrogen fertilizers...OPEC raises prices for crude oil. Items like these in the news remind us of our dependence on non-renewable resources. Farmers have cause to ponder: Can we sustain our crop production if we continue this dependence?

Producing and delivering fertilizers uses fossil fuel energy. Natural gas comprises 80 to 90 percent of the cost of producing ammonia. Phosphate production doesn't use as much energy directly, but it depends on the petroleum industry for its supply of sulfur. It takes a ton of sulfur to produce a ton of P_2O_5. Potash mining uses little in the way of fossil fuel, but it requires energy to transport and apply any kind of fertilizer.

The raw materials for fertilizers are also non-renewable resources. While the supply of atmospheric nitrogen is virtually unlimited — about 37 thousand tons above every acre on the earth — it takes natural gas to make plant-available fertilizer from it. The estimated world reserves of phosphate rock amount to at least three billion tons of P_2O_5 — roughly 80 years' supply at current rates of use. Known reserves of potash exceed 10 billion tons of K_2O — at least 400 years' supply.

But will North American reserves of phosphate rock run out within the next 25 years? Probably not. For both phosphate and potash, large resources that are uneconomical to mine with today's technology and prices could potentially supply us into the future for 10 times as long as the known reserves. As recently as 1980 a publication forecast that Florida could run out of high-grade phosphate rock by the year 2000 — yet Florida today continues to supply most of North America's demand. As with fossil fuels, new reserves continue to be discovered as fast as old ones are consumed.

Sustainability of fertilizer use also depends on its benefits to soil quality and health. Sustainable use recognizes that fertilizers boost the crop's contribution of organic matter to the soil as well as its yield. Sustainable use aims to apply amounts in keeping with the needs of the cropping system, supplementing nutrients supplied by manures, crop residues, and other organic inputs. Sustainable use includes management that minimizes loss of nutrients to sensitive waters and the air, through knowledge of nutrient cycling.

The future will include more efficient capture of nutrients from animal manures, crop residues, and other organic materials. Agriculture will redesign itself to increase this efficiency, but some nutrients will continue to be lost to the larger cycles of nature. Nutrient demands will increase as yields continue to climb. Supplementing with fertilizers is a responsible use of natural resources from off the farm. Energy costs of transport and application are minimized when more concentrated nutrient sources are used.

No physical process is sustainable indefinitely. The key to sustainability is to use resources wisely to meet human needs for today and for future generations. Using mineral fertilizers to build soil health and to increase its capacity to produce food is a more sustainable investment than many others that are being made today.

Deere Partners To Introduce System

SAN ANTONIO, Texas — Recent developments in agriculture are driving changes in the way today's growers manage their crop production practices.

The introduction of crops with customized traits requires a new level of recordkeeping and attention to detail in order to preserve value and to ensure traceability.

To meet this challenge, agribusiness leader John Deere has joined forces with VantagePoint Network, and Crop Verifeye, LLC to develop and introduce an innovative crop identity-tracing system call CropTracer™. This new service combines John Deere's field data collection technology with VantagePoint's data warehousing capabilities and Crop Verifeye's third-party certification and field auditing services to build an advanced crop-tracking system.

John Deere's Ag Management Solutions (AMS) group has developed a new product called Field Doc™ that works with existing equipment to enable collection of data on field operations in real time. Field Doc™ operates with the StarFire™ Global Position Satellite (GPS) receiver, the GreenStar® display, and GreenStar mobile processor.

"Field Doc software collects and records information on all field operations from planting to harvest," said Terry Porter, marketing manager of AMS. "All the information can be readily transferred to your home computer and/or stored on the VantagePoint Network Web site depending on your needs."

"New-generation GreenStar products and other systems from AMS will be offered in the near future to more fully automate this data collection process," Porter said.

CropVerifeye (patent pending) provides ISO9000 third-party verification of the most stringent contract specifications.

"We offer two levels of field audits (Gold and Silver). Our trained auditors will verify any and all details to meet your contract requirements from field practices, varietal purity, weed and insect control to storage site and/or equipment sanitation," said Dr. Jim Mock, co-founder and vice-president, marketing/sales, Crop Verifeye.com.

VantagePoint Network (www.vantagepoint.com) offers a private, secure site to document, store, and view the collected information.

"VantagePoint is a tool to help manage your information," said Dale Johnson, director of commercial accounts for VantagePoint Network. "This information can also be shared discretely with your trusted agribusiness suppliers, contractors, advisers, and food processors."

CNH Reports First Quarter Results

RACINE, Wis. — CNH Global N.V. (NYSE:CNH) reported first quarter consolidated net revenues of $2.454 billion compared to revenues of $2.608 billion last year. When adjusted for the impact of divestitures and foreign exchange rates, net revenues were essentially unchanged year-over-year. The company's industrial operating margin rose to $91 million, compared to $31 million for the same period in 2000.

On a net basis, CNH reported a loss, before restructuring, of $67 million, or $.24 per share compared to $54 million, or $.36 per share for the first quarter last year. When adjusted for the impact of the equity devaluation in Turkey of approximately $.05 per share, the company's EPS was slightly better than expectations. (Per share results for the 1999 period are based upon a lower number of shares.) After restructuring, the net loss was $70 million, or $.25 per share compared to $59 million, or $.40 per share for the first quarter last year.

"Our overall performance was somewhat better than expected in the first quarter," said Paolo Monferino, president and chief executive officer. "Our sales of agricultural equipment in the Americas were encouraging and in Western Europe, our unit sales were up in a down market.

"Our restructuring plan is on schedule as our gross margin and SG&A improvements demonstrate. We are confident that we will achieve our full year objective of merger-related profit improvements of at least $300 million. These improvements will help us bring our industrial operating margin up to $400 million for 2001. As a result, our financial outlook for the year remains unchanged: a year-over-year reduction of approximately $100 million in net loss."

First quarter net sales from Equipment Operations totaled $2.286 billion, down six percent compared to $2.423 billion for the same period in 2000.

Equipment Operations gross margin as a percent of net sales of equipment improved to 17.1 percent in the first quarter of 2001, compared to 15.7 percent for the same period last year, in spite of the decline in construction equipment sales and an unfavorable product mix.

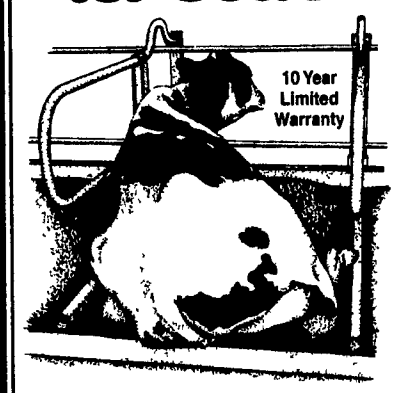
Waterbeds for Cows



ALANTA® A member of the LinPoly group of companies Patent Pending

The ALANTA Waterbed for cows is a revolutionary product, comfortable, safe and hygienic. It will greatly improve your [illegible] and the overall profitability of your milk production. It is the ultimate cow lying covering for the robotic, animal-friendly dairy farm.

HOW MADE
The ALANTA Waterbed is made of two rubber layers with a water-filled compartment in between. The ALANTA gives a 10-[illegible]

COMFORTABLE
The waterbed molds itself to the cow's shape. It's cool in summer and pleasantly warm in winter.

SAFE
Thanks to the non-slip rubber upper surface, the cow is gripped firmly and cannot slip off. In this way the ALANTA waterbed keeps damage to hooves to a minimum.

Here's What Some of Your Neighbors Say About Alanta Waterbeds:

David Bittner, Fleetwood, PA
"We are very pleased with the decision to go with the waterbeds. First calf heifers have adapted exceptionally well and are often lying down within two hours of being put in the stall."

Ichtus Farm, Lititz, PA
"I'm pleased with how the waterbeds retain their comfort over time."
